Preface.

PRAISE DIVINE.

Oh, how the weary, longing soul
That faces the eternal goal,
 Delights to praise
The One who, from His throne above,
Came down to show to us His love
 And bless our days !

And how it brightens up the road
That ends in His divine abode,
 And what sweet joy
It always gives to you and me,
When in our Saviour's praises we
 Our hearts employ !

Far more than worthy is the Lord
Of all the praise that is outpoured
 Along the way ;

Far more than worthy of the best
That can by mortals be expressed
 From day to day.

Amid the scenes of sin and strife,
His love is bringing into life
 New songs of worth,
From loving hearts and souls that try
His Holy name to glorify
 Upon the earth.

So, for His glory, PRAISE DIVINE
Is sent along the battle-line.

 On wings of love,
New cheer, new courage to impart,
New carols for the singing heart
 To send above.

JAMES ROWE.

Allegro

1. Hear the sing-ing far a-way, O over there,
2. Hush! I hear my loved ones sing.
3. And methinks I hear them say,
4. No more are we, no more care,
5. Come, my friends, and let us go, O—over there, in that home, home just over there,

Where there is no sad-ling day! O over there!
 Where glad anthems are at ring!
 Come, we pilgrims, come this way!
 But a—far and joy to share!
 From this sad world be—low! Over there, yes, over in that home just a-way there!

 And the angels sing of His glory here,
 For the souls of men and their salvation,
 Looking you and me, speaking words of love.

We had wandered far in the paths of sin,
 Yet He came to us on the cross of shame,
 And for those who trust, and His word will prove,
 We had wandered far in the paths of sin.

In He came to earth, our souls to win,
 To redeem our souls from evil sin,
 He is building houses on our hearts above,
 In He came to earth, our souls to win.
