Out of our past

At the turn of the century, the Kings Mountain Baptist Association sensed the need for a high school in the Boiling Springs area. The association's efforts helped begin a Denominational high school on the present-day campus of Gardner-Webb University. It was called Boiling Springs High School and it operated from 1907 to 1928. Above, students sit in front of the Huggins-Curtis Building, also known as the Main Building. Later, as the public schools began to open in the Boiling Springs area, Boiling Springs High School became Boiling Spring Junior College.
