Gardner-Webb University

Digital Commons @ Gardner-Webb University

GWU-Today

11-17-2014

Different Words with Different Meanings

Travis Archie

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.gardner-webb.edu/gwu-today

Recommended Citation

Archie, Travis, "Different Words with Different Meanings" (2014). GWU-Today. 88.

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by Digital Commons @ Gardner-Webb University. It has been accepted for inclusion in GWU-Today by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Gardner-Webb University. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@gardner-webb.edu.

Different words with different meanings

② November 17, 2014 ▲ GWU Today ▷ News ♀ 0

Photo by: Elizabeth Banfield

By: Travis Archie

The United States of America is a country that stretches from the Atlantic Ocean to Pacific Ocean. With this vast territory comes different types of words that have the same meaning. Buggie, cart, beanie, toboggan, soda, pop, you guys, y'all, cut on the lights, and turn on the lights; just using one of these words or phrases

SIDEBAR

Please navigate to Appearance → Widgets in your WordPress dashboard and add some widgets into the Sidebar widget area. normally labels where a person is from in the U.S.

Gardner-Webb junior Erik Barr, from Western Pennsylvania, and sophomore Autumn Dufiled, from Anaheim California, have a few similarities in the way they say objects and actions.

Both of them use the terms beanie and grocery cart, and the phrase, turn on the light. Their linguistics diverges after that; Duflied prefers to say soda instead of pop, which is said by Barr. Duflied also uses you guys, while Barr uses "yinz," the Pittsburg equivalent.

Photo by: Elizabeth Banfield

Junior Jill Blank is from the Eastern part of Pennsylvania and junior Matt Cook is from Burke County, North Carolina. Blank says beanie instead of saying toboggan, like Cook. Although she is from the North, she says, soda"like Duflied.

Cook says, "yuns" opposed to Blank who says, you guys. Also, in the grocery store Cook pushes a buggy while Blank pushes a cart. The phrase turn on the lights is used by Blank, while Cook uses the Southern term, cut on the lights.

Deanna Ramsey is from Earl, North Carolina, and Timothy Jacquez is from Statesville, North Carolina. They are both from the same general area, but they also have different linguistics; just like Blank and Barr, who are both from Pennsylvania.

Jaquez, who was raised in California says, beanie instead of toboggan, which is used by Ramsey. Beverage and the phrase, turn on the lights is also used by Ramsey, but Jacquez uses soda and the phrase, cut on the lights, all the while, both Ramsey and Jaquez use the words y'all and buggie.

Words are the primary way for people to communicate, and if there is a word or two that differs, then that does not matter as long as the correct message gets through.

Deanna Ramsey poses with her toboggan. Photo by: Travis Archie

« PREVIOUS Runnin' Bulldog offense struggles in loss NEXT » Gardner-Webb Theatre Department puts on their last show of the fall

Copyright © 2023 | WordPress Theme by MH Themes