The Web Magazine 1981, May/June

Deborah B. Putnam
Graduation activities began Friday afternoon May 15 with the pinning of 17 nursing students. The graduating activities were climaxd Saturday with the conferring of 139 Bachelor of Science, 76 Bachelor of Arts, and 22 Associate Arts degrees.

Two citizenship medals were awarded to Bradley Scott Riddle, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J.K. Riddle of Hendersonville, N.C., and Rachel Elizabeth Schlafer, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. F.G. Schlafer of Knoxville, Tennessee.

Miss Mary Louise Abrams, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Abrams of Boiling Springs, N.C., received a Senior Scholaristic Award, and Miss Schlafer received a Senior Scholaristic Award. These students maintained a 4.0 quality point average throughout four years of study at Gardner-Webb.

Dr. William G. Tanner, president of the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board in Atlanta, Georgia, was commencement speaker.
Reagan's Budget Cuts And Student Financial Aid

The budget cutting continues to make front page news. While we all would like to have our taxes cut and the federal budget balanced, each of us realizes this can be done only by cutting some of the current Federal and State programs. The proposal to cut student financial aid is of particular concern to all private colleges.

Gardner-Webb College supports the President's principle of a balanced budget but is concerned that this particular cut will severely affect students who wish to attend private colleges such as Gardner-Webb. To offset the proposed Federal and State financial aid cuts, Gardner-Webb is committing its own resources.

The Gardner-Webb offset grants will be provided according to the financial needs analysis forms completed by students who have been accepted to the College. The amount of State and Federal aid not available for the '81-'82 academic year because of the cuts will be supplied from Gardner-Webb funds. Because the amount the funds will be cut will not be known until mid-summer, this commitment of Gardner-Webb funds lets our students know funds will be available to meet the amount for which they qualify.

Even before these proposed cuts were announced, it was the objective at Gardner-Webb to make our students as independent from government funds as is the College. The only way this can be done is to raise enough money from the private sector to meet the true financial needs of our students. Freeing Gardner-Webb students from the need to apply for government assistance is an awesome goal when you realize an endowment of $30 million would have been needed to provide the $3 million needed for financial aid in 1980-81.

In response to this need for student financial aid the Dover Foundation of Shelby, North Carolina, established the Charles I. Dover Independence Scholarship Fund. Its generous grant of $100,000 formally launched Gardner-Webb's program to make students free of any Federal aid. The Dover Foundation set a fine example for those of us who believe that the private sector must take an active role in supporting private education.

We all have an obligation to make our representatives in Raleigh and Washington aware of our support of private education. I urge you to ask your representatives to make student aid a top priority in the '81-'82 State and Federal Budgets.

One Hundred Scholarships Established

One hundred Gardner-Webb College scholarships have been established.

The scholarships will be awarded in the names of each of the individuals serving on the Ministerial Board of Associates. Each member will have an opportunity to recommend students for the scholarships. Students applying must be approved by the financial aid office and meet admission requirements.

A $250 a year grant is renewable for four years with a total of $1,000 for each of the students available during four years of study.

"The scholarship program," stated Robert Abrams, director of church relations at the College, "emphasizes the importance that the College places upon the Ministerial Board of Associates and recognizes the value of the services of the individual members to the College."

The Board is composed of ministers, church workers, and denominational leaders. It's purpose is to receive suggestions from the members on how the College can better serve the churches of the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina and to provide a group of ministers in the field who can assist Gardner-Webb as representatives at associational meetings and in other various ways.

PHILLIP E. HAMRICK

As president-elect of the 150 member state chapter of the Health Physics Society, Hamrick will be in charge of planning and coordinating programs of the organization for the coming 12 months and then serve one year as president. In addition to professional concerns, the Society has a program of public outreach to educate the public on radiation technology.
Seventeen Nurses Pinned

A four-o’clock, May 15, pinning ceremony was held at Boiling Springs Baptist Church for 17 nurses graduating from Gardner-Webb. Patricia Burnett provided organ music, and Rev. T. Max Linnens gave an invocation. “You’ll Never Walk Alone” was sung by Eva Whittington, a student, as Eddie Shope, a nursing graduate, accompanied her on the guitar.

Dr. Craven E. Williams welcomed the parents and friends. Dr. George Cribb, Academic Cabinet member, introduced the speaker. Ms. Alice Stecker, director of nursing service in Rutherford Hospital, issued the address challenging the graduates to take control of their lives and to be an active member of their professions. Nursing Department Chairman Shirley Toney pinned the nurses, and Mrs. Jack Hamrick, Jr., president of the Cleveland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, presented roses on behalf of the Cleveland Memorial and Rutherford Hospitals’ auxiliaries.

Academic and Nursing Awards were presented on behalf of the medical staffs of Cleveland Memorial and Rutherford Hospitals. Lynn Ledbetter Blanton received the academic award, and Elizabeth Dianne West received the Best All Around Student award.

Students Observe “Arts In The Schools” Week

Approximately 450-500 elementary and middle school students were on campus April 2, to observe performances of the Opera Workshop in the Hamrick Auditorium. This was in conjunction with “Arts in the Schools” week.

Students representing the Department of Fine Arts at the College included Teresa Yingling, Deborah James, Dwight Loomis, Betty Skorman, Patricia Burnett, Barry Whitfield, Susan Hall, Robert Walker, Billy Jack Martin, Dan Le Grange, Tim Parker, Bruce Wilson, and Tim Abernathy.

LAST CHANCE!

Your last chance to contribute to the 1980-81 Annual College Fund is June 30, the end of our fiscal year.
The annual giving goal is $182,000 for fiscal 1980-81. This is but 2.8% of the year’s total College budget, and it is a vital part of the unrestricted funds needed for the day-to-day operations of an institution of this size and scope.

All of you received a substantial subsidy from previous generations in that they made it possible for Gardner-Webb to be here for you. By the same token, you have that obligation to future generations.
Invest in the futures of your children and grandchildren. Give to the Annual College fund TODAY!

A $15,000 gift has been received from Eaton Corporation, a producer of heavy duty truck transmissions in Kings Mountain, N.C. It was presented by Plant Manager John Major, a current College alumnus. The gift has been designated for the $3.7 million Lutz-Yelton Convocation Center. Major, right, studies the construction plans for the 64,000 square foot structure with Dr. Williams. This amount brought the contributions and pledges to $3,452,007.
THE BULLDOG CLUB
NEEDS ALUMNI MEMBERSHIPS

The Bulldog Club was formed in the late 1960's by a group of hometown residents. The purpose of the Bulldog Club was to promote Bulldog athletics and raise funds for athletic scholarships.

Raising funds for athletic scholarships is still the Bulldog Club's purpose, but support from Gardner-Webb Alumni has been low in the past. The Bulldog Club needs the support from the alumni so that Gardner-Webb can compete on an even basis with other colleges.

It is the hope of every present Bulldog Club member that each alumnus consider joining the club at one of the below membership levels.

BECOME A BULLDOG CLUB MEMBER

All contributors giving $50-$84 annually will receive the following privileges: (1) Bulldog Club auto-window decal, (2) athletic events schedules, (3) one Bulldog Club general ticket for all home football and basketball games, (4) newsletters from the sports information office, (5) invitation to such special events as the Bulldog All-Sports Banquet.

Dear Mrs. Putnam:

Those Were The Years picture in the March/April WEB. I immediately remembered seeing a picture similar to that one in my annual. Sure enough after a little searching I came up with an answer. Were The Years contest. Both will receive gifts. Reprinted are two very enjoyable letters. Now, who can identify these five former students?

Gardner-Webb mascot

The Gardner-Webb mascot is believed to have been chosen by the Boiling Springs community early in the 1900's when Gardner-Webb was then Boiling Springs High School from 1907 to 1928.

The Bulldog was a popular pet in Boiling Springs during that time, and several community members owned Bulldogs. For this reason, it is believed that the Bulldog became the mascot of Boiling Springs High School, and it has remained as the institution's mascot through Boiling Springs Junior College (1928-1942), Gardner-Webb Junior College (1942-1969), and Gardner-Webb Senior College (1969-present).

What Would You Do?

Bob Shepherd

What would you do if you had 1,500 students who needed your help? These are students who prefer a small, independent college which reflects the values of the Christian Church. A high percentage of these students want to prepare for a Christian vocation.

I am referring to young men and women who have expressed a desire to pursue their education at Gardner-Webb College. They know that costs are higher at a private institution than at a tax-supported institution. Most of the students who want to attend Gardner-Webb cannot afford the additional costs. Someone must help.

The reduction in government aid for students means that in the fall of '81, many of these students will be unable to pay Gardner-Webb's comprehensive fee. At Gardner-Webb our objective is to help our students to become as independent from the government as the College is. The only way this can be accomplished is to raise enough money from the private sector to meet the true financial need of students without having to seek government assistance.

Gardner-Webb is committed to making up the funds which President Reagan's cut-back will eliminate from our students' financial aid package. We expect 1500 students at our door this fall. Will you help us to help them?

If you will help us with this or if you wish further information, please let me know. Bob Shepherd, Vice-President for Development, Gardner-Webb College at Gardner-Webb College Boiling Springs, N.C. 28017. Telephone (704) 434-2361.

Gardner-Webb Fever

You might say that Marsha Moss and her family have Gardner-Webb fever. No, they aren't red-hot Bulldog sports fans. What Marsha and her family are mostly interested in at Gardner-Webb College is the academic life.

Marsha is a student in the Greater Opportunities for Adult Learners program at Gardner-Webb College. Her sister is in the GOAL program at the Gaston County Center. Her cousin is a dorm student majoring in K-3 education at Gardner-Webb, and another cousin commutes to the Boiling Springs campus from Lattimore for day classes.

And, if that isn't enough, another aunt is planning to enroll in the GOAL program either during the Summer session or Fall 1981 semester, and it is even possible that another cousin may be enrolling.

Marsha explains her family's 'affair' with Gardner-Webb College. Seems they all wanted to attend night classes somewhere, but until the GOAL program, which allows working adults to obtain a degree by attending classes after 5 p.m., was started, they weren't able to do so. Now that the GOAL program is in full swing, Marsha and her family can get their college degrees.

Presently, there are GOAL centers in Catawba County, Gaston County, Isothermal College, Lincoln County, Morganton, and Statesville in addition to the Boiling Springs Center.

Dear Mrs. Putnam:

I am very excited when I turned to the "Those Were The Years" picture in the March/April WEB. I immediately remembered seeing a picture similar to that one in my annual. Sure enough after a little searching I came up with an answer. The picture I found is on the 9th page of the 1965 Anchor. I believe this young man is Kenneth Wayne Fortune of Morganton, N.C., class of '66, and the young lady is Mary Colville Griffith of Culpepper, Va., class of '66. Thanks for such an informative newspaper and for the dedication of you and your staff.

Sincerely,

Paula Jones Brake '66

Dear Mrs. Putnam:

I am writing to answer the March/April 1981 "Those Were The Years" in the WEB.

The couple pictured are Mary Griffith and Wayne Fortune—Class of 1966. This picture appeared in the 1965 Anchor and I recognized it from being on the annual staff.

Thank you for your excellent efforts in publishing the WEB. I look forward to receiving each issue.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Judy Cooke Dudley
Class of 1965

Taylor Receives Faculty Merit Award

Dr. James (Jim) Taylor, professor of English, received the Faculty Merit Award at the annual Awards Day in May.

The Faculty Merit Award recipient is selected by the Alpha Chi, an honor society, and the faculty for exhibiting quality instruction in the classroom. Taylor joined the faculty in 1964. He is a graduate of Carson-Newman and Appalachian State University. He also received a Ph.D. degree in English from Indiana University of Pennsylvania. He is married to the former Barbara Cadden of Columbus, Mississippi. They have two children, Kelly and Chris.

Grant Of $100,000 Received

A grant of $100,000 from the Dover Foundation of Shelby, North Carolina, has been given to the College to establish the Charles I. Dover Independence Scholarship Fund. Announcement of the grant was made by College President Craven E. Williams at the annual banquet of the College Alumni Association, Saturday, April 11.

In making the grant announcement, President Williams stated: "This college has steadfastly refused to seek or accept direct government funds. Our long-term objective is to enable our students to be as free of government funds as possible. This can be accomplished only when we have sufficient funds from the private sector to make it unnecessary for students to seek government aid. This generous grant from the Dover Foundation launches formally our effort to establish a major Independence Scholarship Fund for our students." The funds from the Dover Foundation will be used to offset the gap in financial aid resulting from President Reagan's budget cutbacks. Charles I. Dover, President-Treasurer of the Dover Textile Group said, "We have a commitment to making a Gardner-Webb College education accessible to truly needy students. I believe the private business community needs to take an active role in an educational program which reflects our own belief in the free enterprise system. Gardner-Webb College is a splendid example of a free enterprise in education—promoting, respecting, advocating, and practicing the same business philosophies we hold at Dover Textiles."

The members of the Dover family have been long-time friends of Gardner-Webb College. Mr. Charles I. Dover and his late brother, John R. Dover, Jr., both served the College as Trustees, and both served terms as Chairman of the Board. In 1944, the brothers established the Dover Foundation to support deserving educational, religious, and charitable causes. Through the years the Foundation has contributed to the educational development of the area while underwriting charities, service agencies, and community health, welfare, recreational, and cultural activities. The Foundation also makes a unique college scholarship plan available to high schools in the area and to children of Dover Textile employees.

NTE Scores 200 Points Higher

Gardner-Webb College students taking the National Teachers Examination (NTE) are scoring 200 points higher than is necessary for certification in the teaching field. The exam is a national requirement for persons desiring teaching certification. Approximately 75 to 100 prospective teachers from Gardner-Webb take the examination each year. The passing rate on the NTE is close to 95% with an employment placement figure above 90%.

"We are continuing to increase the standards for admission into teacher education programs," stated Education Department Chairman J. Allen Queen. He continued, "Our National Teachers Examination scores are steadily increasing. Two hundred points higher than is needed for certification is quite an accomplishment when you consider that all of the scores are averaged.

Factors such as a continued effort to offer services within the community for the undergraduate and graduate students in the in-service education program and required standard screening processes for students desiring to enter the field of education contribute to the increased scores.

John Drayer

Elected Vice-President

Dr. John R. Drayer, associate professor of religion, has been elected vice chairman of the 95-member faculty at Gardner-Webb. Elected by faculty colleagues, Drayer will preside over and coordinate all matters relating to faculty meetings, chair the Administrative Advisory Committee, serve on the Academic Cabinet, and plan faculty workshops, retreats, and seminars.

Drayer joined the College faculty in 1973. Prior to this, he taught one year at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky, and was pastor of Parkview Baptist Church in Gainesville, Florida, for three years.

He received a B.A. degree from Belmont College in Nashville, Tennessee. He earned the Bachelor of Divinity, Master of Theology, and Doctor of Philosophy degrees from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

A gift from the Old North State Chapter 79 Telephone Pioneers to Gardner-Webb will have a great impact on hearing-impaired students in this region.

The group has provided funds to wire the campus' $3.7 million athletic arena and fine arts theatre, presently being constructed, with an apparatus to amplify the sound going to the hearing aids of a hearing-impaired person.

Dr. Jerry Potter, who works with the N.C. Deaf Missions Board of North Carolina, provided the guidance to establish a deaf program on the Gardner-Webb campus in 1977. Potter and Irving Kelly, community relations director of the Pioneers, collaborated to design the inductive loop system.

Mrs. Edith Brann, president of the Pioneers, a service organization of Western Electric Company, explained that the Pioneers are professional employees of the Western Electric Office on Reynolda Road in Winston-Salem, who have been with the company 18 or more years or are retired from the company.

Christian Service Organization Meets 10-Year Goal

Members of the Christian Service Organization of the College held a tenth anniversary banquet in April and celebrated obtaining their goal of $100,000.

The $100,000 received since 1971 has been used in endowments to aid students preparing for full-time Christian work.

The Rev. Dean Coffey conducted the meeting with speeches presented by Rev. Buddy Freeman, former campus minister; Dr. Robert Morgan, French professor; and Robert Abrams, director of Church relations at the College.

Mrs. Tyner Ivester, secretary-treasurer of the group, gave the financial report, and two Gardner-Webb College students, Christina Burleson and Gerard Marchese, gave personal testimonies.

Alumnus Appointed At Southeastern

Edwin F. Sansbury will become Audiovisual Services Director at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary on August 1, 1981. He is presently Acting Director.

Sansbury, a native of Harstville, S.C., holds the B.A. degree from Gardner-Webb College and the Master of Divinity degree Southeastern. Sansbury is married to the former Kathryn Cassidy of Harstville; they have two children.

In making the announcement, Southeastern president W. Randall Lolley said, “Ed has had a growing sense of calling to a ministry in audiovisual services and theological education. The appointment has been made at this particular time in part to assure that we have Ed’s expertise in planning audiovisual services in our expanded and renovated classroom projects now underway.”

Music Department Presents Concert

On April 14, the Gardner-Webb Music Department presented a concert of band music. The one-hour concert of the Wind Ensemble featured compositions from 1880 to 1980. The blues, rock, boogie, and some golden oldies were featured.

GWC Seniors Give Unique Gift

Dr. Harriett Cabell, director of New College at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa, conducted a faculty development workshop on April 29, concerning adult learners.

Dr. Cabell has served extensively as a consultant to colleges and universities throughout the nation in the area of developing programs to meet the needs of adult learners.

Gardner-Webb has made a major institutional commitment to serve adult learners throughout the region through the Greater Opportunities for Adult Learners (GOAL) program.

Centers are located in Boiling Springs, Dallas, Lincolnton, Morganton, Newton, Spindale, and Statesville.

The program is designed for students with an Associate Degree desiring to study in the areas of Early Childhood Education, Intermediate Education, Business Administration, Management, Information Systems, Criminal Justice, and Human Services.

The Metasequois, commonly known as the Dawn Redwood, was presented to Gardner-Webb College as a departing gift from the Class of 1981. This species was thought to be extinct for millions of years until re-discovered in the temple gardens of China after World War II. It was found in the same area that the Ginko species, also thought to be extinct, was re-discovered. This species is found on the Gardner-Webb campus. The tree will be planted in the terrace of the new $3.7 million Convocation Center which is seen in the background. Pictured (l to r) are Senior Class Vice-President Neal Eldrid of Charlotte, N.C.; Faculty Advisor Dr. David DeGrassi; Secretary Audrey Atwater of Siler City, N.C.; and President Tim Homan of Poughkeepsie, New York. "NEVER GIVE IN"

A Tribute To
Coach Norman Harris

By Dr. Gilmer Blackburn

Vince Lombardi at the height of his success could not have struck more fear into the hearts of athletes than the tough, leathery-faced Gardner-Webb coach that I met in 1958. A piercing stare beneath a strong, furrowed brow was his trademark, and that withering gaze could make Attila the Hun melt right into the Cleveland County turf. To say that Coach Norman Harris was a "strong disciplinarian" is to engage in frivolous understatement.

Great performers from the sports world, such as high school teammate Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice, and James Garrison, protege of Harris and athletic director at Chowan College, paid tribute on Alumni Day (April 11, 1981) to the man who symbolized Gardner-Webb athletics for twenty-one years. Those tributes from the great ones delighted me, but as a former player under Harris, I feel a compulsion to speak a word on behalf of the "average run-of-the-mill football player." To paraphrase Abraham Lincoln, God must have loved average run-of-the-mill athletes because he made so many of them, and, I might add, those players benefitted as much from Harris' coaching as did the great stars.

Coach Harris built a winner's reputation during his early years by coaching rather than by recruiting. It is hard to recruit without money. Taking three or four dozen athletes who had been passed over by bigger colleges, he molded them into consistent winners in football only two losing efforts in twenty-one years. As captain of a high school team with a rich football tradition, I found that major college scouts were unimpressed with a 175 pound guard, even when he averaged 15.9 tackles per game. College scouts stayed away from my doorstep in droves. However, there was a silver lining concealed beneath the dark depressive cloud of an empty mailbox for months on end. I sometimes cringe when I think of what I might have missed had I been forty pounds heavier in high school and had been recruited by a major college team. I could not quit playing football, so I came to the Webb and played for free. I met about forty other players just like myself, and before Coach Harris was through with us, we understood the axiom which states that the whole (in this case a team) is greater than the sum of its parts (players overlooked by larger colleges).

That first year we had the added misfortune of having to play with wornout equipment, which Gardner-Webb obtained from UNC after fire destroyed the team's gear housed in the Huggins-Curtis Building. It took more than "minor" inconveniences to deter Harris, who registered a winner that season as usual.

Players who bragged about their high school newspaper clippings or who brought their trophies with them to Boiling Springs were in for a mortifying experience. The athlete was yet to be born that Coach Harris would pamper. A day or two in the scorching sun under his relentless driving will cause multitudes of glory-seekers to conclude that they were not meant for such a game. From the best-endowed, rippling-muscled athlete to the most scrawny bench-warmer, it was soon apparent that anyone who expected to don the Gardner-Webb black and red would first have to endure pain. The word "travail" took on a new meaning in this world of bruised muscles, blistered feet, aching bones and exhausted bodies. A man was forced to probe the full depths of his inner resources to find strength to continue—well-springs of strength that he often did not know that he had. I once heard one of our greatest athletes blurt out that he would as soon be dead as to continue this torture. Of course, he persevered and developed into a model athlete.

Coach Harris did not talk a lot about integrity, but he exuded a kind of granite-like honesty which left a deep impression on all of us. There could never be any doubt about where he stood: "You will all be treated alike; there is no such thing as cutting practice; either you will be on the practice field or in the infirmary; do not expect the coach to intervene for you to get a grade changed; do not break the rules of the game in order to win." I never knew him to take unfair advantage of an opponent, nor would he tolerate such a quality in a player. But you had better be hard-nosed if you expected to play.

Coach Harris consistently defeated better financed teams, and he did it by running straight at them. Gardner-Webb lost some games, but no one ever beat a Norman Harris coached team because they were better conditioned, or more rugged, or more gutsy. No player or coach ever forgot a contest with Gardner-Webb, and many carry visible reminders of those contests.

A player did not go to Coach Harris' office to "shoot the breeze." He had better have a reason. Yet, if you could meet his high standards he was your friend, and he respected you. He never asked a player to do anything that he wouldn't do—and probably better. He had a standing rule that you could "go into the pit" with a player to challenge him for his position. No one ever went into the pit to challenge the coach for his position. We were not crazy. Everyone knew in the back of his mind that the last person in the world that he wanted to be in the pit with was Coach Norman Harris.

I like to think that I imbued a bit of the Norman Harris toughness and that it aided me in my own career. (There are at least four players from that team who have earned doctoral degrees.) I feel that I owe him an enormous debt of gratitude. If one principle summed up his coaching career, it would be this: life rewards those who refuse to give in. I have found that philosophy hard to improve upon. Whatever else he was—and he embodied so many virtues—he was a man. Every player who ever put on Gardner-Webb's black and red for Coach Norman Harris knew that in this world of phonies and con artists he had met a least one man who was for real. That is no legend. I never ever heard anyone question that.

(The writer is Associate Professor of History at Gardner-Webb where he has been on the faculty since 1968. This tribute is written from the perspective of the football program, although Coach Harris also coached other sports.)
Following the Alumni Banquet, an alumna of some years came up to me and said, "I have always wanted to support the Annual College Fund, but I never have because I couldn't afford to give a large amount. Tonight, though, I decided that I am going to start sending whatever I can each month."

This woman struck right to the heart of the matter. It is your participation that makes the Annual College Fund successful. Of course, the big gifts are important, and without them our task would be impossible.

But if each one of you would respond in some way, great or small, the Annual College Fund would reach its goal and enable Gardner-Webb College to continue to thrive and grow.

College Receives $40,000 Bequest

A $40,000 bequest from the estate of Mrs. Blanche G. Hamrick, who died March 10, 1980, has been given in memory of her late husband V.F. Hamrick.

The gift is being used in the construction of the Lutz-Yelton Convocation Center.

The Hamricks had long been supporters of the College, contributing financially to the general college program and the athletic program. In 1966, the V.F. Hamrick Field House was dedicated and presented to the College.

Computer Equipment Donated

Lutz-Yelton Oil Company has donated an IBM System Three, Model 10 Computer to the College, along with other computer equipment.

With the addition of the new computer, a new major in Computer Science will be added to the curriculum beginning in the Fall. This major will come under the Mathematics department.
