Spring Commencement

Dr. Roberta van der Voort, group vice president of United Way of America, will be guest speaker for the 1983 commencement ceremony at Gardner-Webb College.

Exercises will be held May 14.

Dr. van der Voort joined United Way of America in Alexandria, Va., on Oct. 1 of last year. She formerly was the national executive director of Camp Fire, Inc.

As group vice president, Dr. van der Voort is responsible for the National Academy for Volunteerism and United Way of America’s services outreach program. Other areas under her direction include foundations and endowment/deferred giving programs and the recently established United Way Institute.

Dr. van der Voort began her professional career as director of environmental education for the Cook County Public Schools in Prineville, Ore., where she received the Outstanding Educator Award. She worked for 15 years with the Seattle-King County Council for Camp Fire as executive director, district director and director of camping, among other key posts.

She has frequently been interviewed throughout the country by the press and has appeared on a variety of local television and radio programs.

Dr. van der Voort has led workshops and seminars and served as a conference and meeting speaker on more than 100 occasions. Topics have included management, strategic planning, organization behavior and development, volunteerism, marketing, communications, fund raising, group dynamics, personnel, budgeting, program, supervision, profit subsidiaries in non-profit organizations and youth development.

Dr. van der Voort received her B.S. degree and her master of education degree from Oregon State University and the Ed.D. degree from Seattle University Leadership, Cognate Studies in Business Administration.

She was a member of Phi Kappa Phi at Oregon State University and was named 1980 Legendary Woman of the World by Birmingham-Southern College.

Dr. van der Voort is a member of the National Advisory Board, Youth for Understanding, V.I.P. Program; the board of directors of the National Center for Charitable Statistics; the National Congressional Award Board of Directors; the American Humanities Board of Directors; and the American Association of University Women.

She is a life member of the American Camping Association.

College Sets Enrollment Record

For the third straight year, Gardner-Webb College has set a new spring enrollment record. Figures for the 1983 spring semester show 1697 students enrolled, compared to 1696 in 1982 and 1534 in 1981.

Over the past five years, Gardner-Webb’s over-all enrollment has increased by more than 440 students, nearly 33 percent, making it North Carolina’s fastest growing private college.

“We started out with more students in the fall semester than ever, which certainly contributes to the increased enrollment this spring,” said Richard Holbrook, dean of admissions and enrollment planning. Traditionally, college enrollments drop in the spring. But, Holbrook said, “Our retention rate has been very good for the spring, due to a number of factors.” One, he noted, is a new developmental program designed to aid students who lack sufficient high school backgrounds in math, English or reading.

Also a boon to the college’s steady growth is the GOAL (Greater Opportunities for Adult Learners) program, which offers classes at 13 satellite campuses in communities as far away as Surry County.

The college is continually expanding and diversifying its academic programs. The Broyhill School of Management, begun in the fall of 1982, a four-year nursing program initiated this spring and a program for the blind and visually-impaired, set to begin next fall, promise to highlight Gardner-Webb’s 1983-84 academic year.

“They should further enrollment stability and growth,” says college President Craven Williams. “As we have grown in numbers, so too have we been able to attract students of higher academic abilities. Over the last five years their average SAT scores have increased 153 points. The growth in both numbers and quality is most pleasing to us.”
Deaths Of Professors Shocks G-W Campus

The following words of Dr. Richard Wilson, Professor, Department of Religion, were delivered to students, faculty and family members at the February 1, 1983 Memorial Service. These thoughts express for the President and College Family the sentiments felt by all following the accident.

"Eclipse"

All of us gathered here this morning faced last Friday, January 28, with the abrupt awareness that our world had been plunged into darkness the night before. Friday's dawn did not bring light; and by mid-afternoon on Saturday the darkness had deepened. Today our world remains in darkness as we remember those three from our midst who were lightbearers for us all. Dr. Mike Harrelson, Dr. James Henson, and Dr. John Rast carried light for us, for all of us. Indeed, each of these not only carried light, but embodied light.

Tragedy has come between these three and us. Tragedy has eclipsed the light they shed and we stand in the shadows of their deaths: chilled, anguished, and bewildered.

Today we would do well to recognize that the light which Dr. Harrelson, Dr. Henson, and Dr. Rast so freely gave has NOT been extinguished, but only eclipsed. In the days, weeks, and months ahead, as the pain of this tragedy passes, their lights will shine again. Their lights will shine in this place... and in every place where they are remembered.

But today... today we are overshadowed. We have the promise of light. Yet we stand in darkness. The darkness is real; the anguish is deep; the confusion is profound. We look for light but are surrounded by darkness.

The words of Martin Luther are poignant reminders of how the hope for light and the cold reality of dark sorrow can be felt in the same instant. As Luther stood at the grave of his fourteen year old daughter he is said to have cried out:

Magdalena, Magdalena! You will rise and shine like the stars and the sun.
How strange it is to know she is at peace,
And yet to be so sorrowful.

Today we as a community cry out like Luther:
Oh! Our dear friends! You will rise and shine like the stars and the sun.
How strange it is to know they are at peace,
And yet to be so sorrowful.

We are a community. A special community. We are a community where lives are molded, where lives are shared, and where lives are given. Two weeks ago John Rast and I had driven to Gaffney for a meeting; on the way home our talk turned to a new semester and our feelings about Gardner-Webb. We talked with excitement about our classes, our students, our colleagues, and our community. The conversation ended when John said of this place:

This is a good place with good people.
This is a place where one can invest his life.

This is a good place with good people. And this is a place where Mike Harrelson, Jim Henson, and John Rast invested their lives. For that reason we are a community. A community in darkness, held together by love for one another.

Our tragedy may eclipse the light these, our friends, gave, but the shadow of their deaths does not overpower the love they gave. It is because they loved so much that we hurt so bad. It is their love that we share which holds us close in the darkness. In our experience of the past days the words of Paul are proved:

For I am sure that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor anything else in all creation will be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord. (Romans 8:38-39)

In the darkness of our sorrow it is the depth of our love for these three that creates our anguish. It is our knowledge and assurance of their love for us that holds us together. And our experience has proclaimed that in the midst of this tragic eclipse, God has been on the dark side with us, suffering with our loss and loving us through his pain.

Mike Harrelson, Jim Henson, and John Rast were our friends. Because they

Accident Claims Professors

Gardner-Webb College faced one of the darkest times in its history in late January when a traffic accident claimed the lives of three professors. Dr. Michael Harrelson, and Dr. John Rast were killed instantly on Jan. 27 when their truck collided with a car about eight miles south of Hickory. Dr. James Henson died two days later in a Hickory hospital. The three were returning from teaching duties in Newton when the accident occurred. A Spartanburg, S.C. couple also died in the collision.

A deep sense of loss gripped the campus.

Memorials

Following the tragic accident in which Dr. Michael Harrelson, Dr. John Rast and Dr. James Henson were killed, many friends have asked how memorials might be made in their memory to the college. The memorial may be sent to the President's Office, Gardner-Webb College, Boiling Springs, North Carolina 29017. The families of these men will receive notification of the memorial. You will receive verification of your charitable contribution.

B.E. Morris Is Recognized During Morris Academy Inauguration

Morris Academy Designed To Help Area Churches

"Historically colleges have set up a program and said to the churches, 'come and get it.' With the B.E. Morris Academy we’re asking the churches, 'tell us how to help you understand the Bible.'"

The speaker is a future-looking 69-year-old, Dr. Garland A. Hendricks, who began the directorship September 15 of the newly created B.E. Morris Academy for Christian Studies. The academy is located at Gardner-Webb College.

The B.E. Morris Academy was inaugurated November 7 during services at Grey Stone Baptist Church in Durham, where Rev. Morris was pastor for 21 years. Rev. Morris, 93, attended the event.

Inauguration services were also held at Mulberry Baptist Church in Charlotte on November 28, and at the Gardner-Webb College convocation January 25. Rev. Morris held his membership at Mulberry Baptist after his retirement.

From 1950 to 1953 Hendricks was a professor of church community development at G-W, responsible for preparing ministerial students for service in the immediate area. At that time, G-W was a two-year college.

Under Hendrick's leadership the B.E. Morris Academy plans special learning opportunities both on and off the G-W campus to assist church and denominational leaders in their ministries.

"We invite you to help us understand how we can meet your needs," Hendricks said. "The ministry of the B.E. Morris Academy is for you."

Hendricks emphasized that the academy will seek out from area communities any materials helpful to the spiritual growth or development of individuals, churches, church leaders, and Sunday school students.

In 1963 after teaching at G-W, Hendricks became professor of church community development and director of field work at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary at Wake Forest until returning to G-W to assume his new post.

He and his wife, Estelle Dabbs Hendricks, will live in Boiling Springs.

Gardner-Webb is a liberal arts college affiliated with the Baptist State Convention of N.C., offering associate, bachelor and master's degrees. The college is noted for its independence of federal funding.

PURPOSE

The purposes of THE GARDNER SOCIETY are:

To recognize and honor those who have been outstanding leaders and inspiration to Gardner-Webb College.

To set an example that will stimulate unrestricted annual giving to the college.

To keep Gardner-Webb educationally sound and financially secure.

Members of THE GARDNER SOCIETY have great expectations for Gardner-Webb College. The future is for those who dare to have great expectations and who have the courage, persistence, wisdom and patience to transform these expectations into realities. These vitally concerned friends with whom faculty and administration share their aspirations are an indispensable source of strength and inspiration to Gardner-Webb College.

1982-83 Annual College Fund
"Our Time" News

The '82-'83 Annual College Fund Campaign is very much alive and doing well! As of December 31, 1982 the total is $101,676.91. Last year (1981) ended with a total of $56,814.43, so we are $44,862.48 ahead of last year at the same time.

Many thanks go to all of you who have not only contributed to the Annual Fund, but who have also worked hard to ensure participation by other alumni and friends. You have done an excellent job! Please continue your good work; your contributions are needed so that we can report an Annual Fund goal that has been reached and even surpassed. We have 4½ months left to bring in $38,000. I feel confident that with your continued support, we will have a successful campaign.

Diane Ledbetter and Libby Alexander were recently appointed to new positions at Gardner-Webb College.

Mrs. Ledbetter, development associate at Gardner-Webb College, has been appointed director of alumni affairs for the college.

As director of alumni affairs, Mrs. Ledbetter will coordinate all alumni events including Alumni Day and Homecoming Day. In addition to these duties, Mrs. Ledbetter will continue as development associate in charge of the annual college fund.

Mrs. Ledbetter, who has earned a master of divinity degree from Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, is married to Don Ledbetter, a Gardner-Webb graduate and pastor of New Bethel Baptist Church in Lawndale. The Ledbetters have one child, Benjamin, 5.

Mrs. Alexander has been appointed as the new placement coordinator at Gardner-Webb College.

The college placement office is responsible for aiding seniors in job placement upon graduation. "I hope to expand the program to offer more opportunities for the Gardner-Webb seniors," says Mrs. Alexander. According to Mrs. Alexander, this expansion would include "contacting potential employers throughout the country, not just in North Carolina and South Carolina." Special emphasis will also be placed on reserving a day for company and school representatives to interview students on campus.

Mrs. Alexander is a native of Lexington, N.C., and has earned a master's of music degree from Northwestern University.

Before coming to Gardner-Webb, Mrs. Alexander was organist/music assistant at the First Baptist Church in Morganton, N.C. She is married to Dr. Michael W. Alexander, an optometrist in Shelby.

Two Are Appointed To New Positions
Institutional Advancement

College Administrators Are Promoted

Cited for "their willingness to go beyond the expected," three Gardner-Webb College administrators were promoted by the college's board of trustees at the board's recent quarterly meeting at Winston-Salem.

Promoted were Judith Campbell Friedel, from assistant to the president to director of development; Melvin R. Lutz, from dean of students to vice president for student services; and Larry L. Sale, from dean of continuing education and summer school to assistant academic vice president for special studies.

"These three changes represent an appropriate assignment of titles rather than a change in professional responsibilities," Dr. Craven E. Williams, president of the college, said of the new postings. "Judith, Melvin, and Larry have been performing these duties, and the title changes reflect their levels of responsibilities."

In her new post, Ms. Friedel will be responsible for all public relations, fund raising, placement and alumni activities at G-W. She has been acting as director since April. She will continue as the administrative staff person responsible for liaison with the college's board of trustees, the coordination of the board of advisors, and the corporate documents of the college.

A Birmingham, Ala., native, Ms. Friedel received her B.A. degree from Birmingham Southern College and is completing work on her M.A. degree in education from Gardner-Webb. She previously worked at an advertising agency in Chicago, and in the advertising department at the Shelby Daily Star. She has been a member of the college staff since 1979.

Lutz will be responsible in his new post for coordinating all activity for the 1762 students at the college, including housing, counseling, the student government, and extracurricular activities.

He and his wife Joann Watson Lutz are natives of Lenoir. Lutz is a graduate of Gardner-Webb and Mars Hill College, where he received the M.A. degree.

Lutz has been a member of the G-W faculty and staff since 1969. He and his wife have a daughter, Judith Elaine, 18.

Sale's new post reflects responsibilities for the college's GOAL program, which currently serves over 500 adult students in 12 locations throughout the state; SEE program for gifted and talented junior high school students; and non-degree continuing education programs.

A native of Wilkes County, Sale received his Ed.D. from Indiana University in 1967 and joined the Gardner-Webb faculty as an assistant professor in 1971, becoming head of G-W's continuing education and summer school in 1977. He is married to Janice DeLane Casey, formerly of Elkin; the couple have a daughter, Kelly, 19, and a son, Lowell, 15.

In recommending the three appointments to the board, Williams cited their contributions to the college.

"The strength of Gardner-Webb College has consistently resided in the devotion of its people and their willingness to go beyond the expected in carrying out their work," he said.

Culver Is Broyhill Speaker

At the invitation of the Broyhill Academy, businessmen and women were invited to attend and bring their ministers. The nearly 200 people present heard Dr. Culver urge the ministers to grasp a better understanding of the free enterprise system. At the same time, Dr. Culver challenged business people to incorporate spiritual values into their business practices.

Upcoming activities of the Broyhill Academy include a series of self-care seminars for senior adults and a workshop for farmers to learn more about computers.

Mrs. Rogers Appointed To Committee On Education

Mrs. Marjorie Hoyle Rogers, a Shelby, N.C. resident and member of the Gardner-Webb Alumni Board of Directors, has recently been appointed to the committee, Citizens Concerned for Higher Education.

According to Mrs. Rogers, who attended G-W from 1946 to 1947, the purpose of the committee is to promote the continued quality of education in the state's independent colleges.

Because of the financial burden placed on private colleges, she said, the organization is seeking additional state assistance in the support of students who seek a private college education and assistance in maintaining the quality programs offered by the private colleges.

"We're not trying to discourage students from going to public colleges," she said. "There are alot of students who need the special programs offered by private colleges. We want to see these programs continued and that all students have the opportunity to go to a private college if they want to."

In addition to seeking financial aid, the committee is also studying ways to raise that additional money. In the near future Mrs. Rogers will be talking with local state representatives on a proposal to raise the out-of-state student tuition at state supported colleges by $200. Mrs. Rogers feels that this would generate enough money to allow for increased state funding to private colleges.

Mrs. Rogers is currently serving her second term as Cleveland County register of deeds. She was elected to the office in 1976 and plans to seek a third term in 1984.
Development Report
By Judith C. Fridel

During the last three meetings of the Board of Trustees a program of financial development for the college has been discussed in both the Trustee business sessions and among the Trustees during the informal times associated with these meetings.

From all indications, the Trustees will announce within the next few months, plans for this program of financial development. It is still too soon to know the exact dimensions of this program, but it will certainly be a multi-million dollar program.

The Trustees of Gardner-Webb College are firm in their commitment to continue the quality program development now a trademark for this college. At the same time they are realistic in their assessment of the funds needed to insure that this level of quality in programs will continue.

In thinking about the implications of this fund-raising effort, I was not so impressed with the dollar amount proposed but with the importance of volunteers in the success of such an undertaking. Volunteers have always made the difference in every fund raising effort at Gardner-Webb College.

The vast majority of gift income to the college comes from friends, and the majority of work associated with such an effort is done by volunteers.

Without the loyal and untiring service of the volunteer force associated with Gardner-Webb College, the Trustees would not be so bold in their dreams of just how good this college can become. Volunteers make a significant difference in every accomplishment of the institution and for this support the college is grateful.

Ministerial Board Of Associates Elects New Officers

The Ministerial Board of Associates of Gardner-Webb College has elected new officers. They are as follows:

Chairman—Dr. Joel Jenkins, Jr., Pastor, First Baptist Church, Kings Mountain; Vice-Chairman—Rev. Keith Dixon, Minister of Education; Boiling Springs Baptist Church; Secretary—Dr. Jeff Cranford, Pastor, First Baptist Church, Spindale.

The Ministerial Board has recently worked with the college in establishing the B.E. Morris Academy; in suggesting ways for improved church-college relations; in examining ways to enhance the ministerial scholarship program; and in the continued programming of the Youth Jubilee Weekend to be held May 27-29, 1983.

The next meeting of the Ministerial Board of Associates will be April 20-21, 1983 on the Gardner-Webb Campus.

SEE Program To Be Held In July

The 1983 Gardner-Webb College Summer Enrichment Experience (SEE) program will be held from July 10 to July 23.

The SEE program is a comprehensive two-week session designed for gifted middle and junior high school age students (grades 6-9). The students live in the college dormitories and participate in an academic program conducted by G-W faculty members.

The curriculum will consist of courses in drama, ecology, French, beginning and intermediate computer, tennis and swimming.

Other features included in the program are field trips, cultural activities, social events, and guest speakers.

"The SEE program provides an opportunity for gifted students to go beyond what they have had in junior high school," says Dr. Jim Taylor, director of SEE. "They will explore, under the guidance of an experienced college faculty, new areas which will challenge and enlighten them."

For further information and for applications, write Dr. Jim Taylor, Office of Special Studies, Gardner-Webb College, Boiling Springs, N.C. or call toll free (North Carolina only) 1-800-222-2312.

G-W To Initiate Program For Blind

Gardner-Webb College will add another program for the handicapped this fall when it initiates a degree program for blind and visually impaired students.

The program, which is designed to accommodate 10 students during its first three years and gradually to provide for 20, is made possible with a $125,209 grant from the Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust.

Gardner-Webb first began providing programs for the handicapped in 1978 when it modified buildings to make them accessible for wheelchairs. The college also began offering all its programs to deaf students that year making it one of the few liberal arts colleges in the nation to do so. More than 20 deaf students are enrolled this year.

Since 1978, a program for the blind featuring newspaper advertising as well as national, state and local news has been broadcast over WGWG, the college's FM radio station. The program has recently expanded to include reading from books, plays and other materials. Most of the readers are students, however some are residents of the Boiling Springs community.

Gardner-Webb is eager to be responsive to special academic needs and to find new areas for educational services," said President Craven Williams. "The visually impaired, like the hearing impaired, have had too few options when it comes to higher education. That is a primary motivation for us."

Dr. Williams said the college feels an obligation because of its heritage to develop programs which will offer new possibilities for the blind. The Baptist Church has a long history of special ministries to the deaf and blind, he said, as a Baptist college, Gardner-Webb is "eager to reflect these specializations."

The Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust awarded Gardner-Webb a $146,000 last year to establish a school of nursing. The foundation, a private one located in Winston-Salem, awards about $2 million annually to non-profit organizations to improve health care in the state. Funds for the visually impaired program will be made available over three years.

The search is now under way for a program coordinator, according to Judith Fridel, director of development. Work also is to begin on physical modifications to the campus such as the braille labeling of room numbers and building names and the construction of guidepaths. The college will purchase braille editions and cassette recordings of textbooks and furnish each blind student's room with recorders, braille writers and talking clocks. A resource room is to be set up in the library with special equipment for the students, and other supplies they need will be available in the bookstore. Scholarships will be established based on need.

Dr. Williams estimates that for every handicapped student served in the deaf program, 10 non-handicapped students become involved. He expects the same will be true for the program for the blind and visually impaired.

Each blind or visually impaired student enrolled probably will need up to 75 hours a month in reader service which will be provided by the college. Students will be trained as readers and tutors for the blind students and paid the minimum hourly wage. The faculty also is to receive in-service training to prepare for the students.

Dr. Williams said that Dr. Logan Carson, an associate professor of religion, was the first to suggest that the college pursue a program for visually handicapped students. Dr. Carson, who has been blind since birth, assisted in writing the proposal to the Reynolds Foundation and chairs the coordinator-search committee.

They believe job placement after graduation to be essential to the success of the program. "If this program cannot in the end help the visually handicapped student find employment in the outside world, then it is no different than most other type programs," the proposal states.

They see the search for jobs for the visually impaired students as the next phase of the program which makes it unique to all others. All visually impaired students will be given the opportunity to work at jobs related to their career goals during their four years at Gardner-Webb either on campus or in the community. The students also will be assisted in finding employment after graduation by the program coordinator and/or the placement office.

Authors, Publisher Take Part In Seminars

Some of the area's most noted authors and columnists gathered on the Gardner-Webb campus for a two-day seminar held on February 23 and March 2.

Approximately 35 people were present as Kathryn Hamrick, columnist for the Foothills View, opened the February 23 seminar. "I turn everyday events into special events," she said. Mrs. Hamrick, whose column is titled "The Farmers Wife," began writing as a reaction to the shock of becoming a housewife and mother. "Trying to talk to others became an outlet for my astonishment," she said.

Mrs. Hamrick said she writes for spiritual reason, for the enjoyment of others, but mainly she writes for herself.

"A housewife gets tired of comparing the price of different types of toilet paper," said Mrs. Hamrick. "Writing is a challenge, there is a feeling of accomplishment," she said.

John Roberts, editor of the Baptist Courier, spoke on the importance of the audience, particularly when writing for a specialty journal such as one with a religious or sports theme.

Roberts also emphasized the importance of objectivity. "Your choice of words and sentence structure can reflect your opinion," he said. According to Roberts, many journalists today feel that it is important to influence the community. Informing the audience is still more important than trying to influence the audience he said.

Also speaking at the seminar was Dr. Gil Blackburn, author of The German Apocalypse and professor of history at Gardner-Wells. Blackburn spoke of the perseverance, tenacity and obsession necessary in writing a scholarly book. To write a book, said Blackburn, "you have to want to know more about something than anybody else in the entire world knows. You have to be interested in going as far as you can go not just farther than someone else."

Sally McMillan, publisher of the East Woods Press, a Charlotte publishing house that primarily publishes cookbooks and travel guides, told the audience what a publisher looks for in a writer.

The most important area of writing according to Mrs. McMillan is the expertise of the author. "I find it absolutely essential for my writers to be somewhat of an expert on the subject matter," said Mrs. McMillan. The author must do thorough research on the subject matter but must also "breathe individual character into a book."

Approximately 60 people were present on March 2, as Frye Gaillard, columnist for the Charlotte Observer and author of Race, Rock and Religion spoke on "The call of writing."

Gaillard, who is from Alabama, attributes his writing style and his subject matter to his Southern roots. "I grew up with people who had a powerful sense of themselves," said Gaillard. "They were incapable of dealing with another human other than being his equal."

Gaillard later realized the inequalities of the race issue. "What applied to whites didn't apply to blacks," he said.

Because of the civil rights movement and the race issue, Gaillard developed an interest in religion. "I could never understand how the civil rights movement began," said Gaillard. "There was no reason to think the movement would work."

After talking to the daughter of Martin Luther King, Gaillard realized the movement came from religion. "It was the only institution blacks were allowed to have," he said.

During the early 1970's, Gaillard moved to Nashville, Tenn. "Living in Nashville, country music is bombarded into your brain," he said. According to Gaillard, it was at that time he realized the importance of music as a means of reflecting the culture of an era. "Music is a revealing window on the minds and hearts of people," he said.

Alumnus On Helicopter Team

Recently 2LT David W. Cribb of Boiling Springs, NC, has joined the elite ranks of perhaps the most distinguished helicopter pilots in the U.S. Military for peacetime operations. Lt. Cribb has been assigned to Detachment 1 of the 67th Fighter Weapons Wing, a helicopter unit based at Indian Springs Auxiliary Field, Nevada. Indian Springs AFB has become nationally known as the home of the USAF performance team, the Thunderbirds.

Even though Indian Springs was the site of the Thunderbirds fatal crash last year, it was also home of the lifesaving helicopter unit that was credited with saving over sixty people during the fatal MGM Grand and Las...

As she readied a package recently to send to her old high school, now Gardner-Webb College, Mrs. C.A. Hasty wrote, "This is a prize possession of mine — hope it will find a welcome home." So prized was the gift — an heirloom quilt — in its new home that a showcase will soon be built in the college library to display it.

Plainly not a quilt that was put down on the floor for a baby to play on, this one, made in the mid-1800s by Mrs. Hasty's great-great-grandmother, looks almost new. Pieced onto a muslin background, the holly-like pattern in brown, bright red and mustard was cut from goods dyed with roots and herbs, Mrs. Hasty believes. Library director Jim Mow says he hopes exposure to light, while on exhibit, will not cause it to fade.

Mrs. Hasty, who graduated from Boiling Springs High School in 1918, is now a resident of the Methodist Retirement Home at Winston-Salem.

Vegas Hilton hotel fires. Because of the pilots' heroic efforts on those days, Detachment 1 was named the outstanding unit of the year for the Air Force.

Lt. Cribb completed the Officer Rotary Wing Aviator Class at Fort Rucker, Alabama, in July. Lt. Cribb was named the Distinguished Graduate of class 82-04 in recognition of his finishing first in his class of 66 new aviators. He received the traditional pair of engraved sterling silver wings from General Robert Joyce during the graduation ceremony. He then completed his upgrade training to the UH-1N helicopter at Kirtland AFB, New Mexico, and aircrew survival school at Fairchild AFB, Washington.

Lt. Cribb is the son of Dr. and Mrs. George R. Cribb, of Boiling Springs, NC, and an honor graduate of Gardner-Webb College and Clemson University.
The first-place trophy for the largest and most prestigious small college basketball tournament has returned to Gardner-Webb for the fifth time.

The WBTV Carolina Classic has long been a source of pride to the college whose Bulldogs have claimed the tournament championship for five of the eight years in its history.

Held Dec. 1-4, the 1982 Classic saw the Bulldogs defeat four tough opponents to regain the title they last won in 1979.

First to fall in G-W's climb to the top were the Sabers of Barber-Scotia. Excellent play by Eddie Wilkins with 22 points and 14 rebounds and Terry Camp, who added 17 points, helped the Bulldogs to a 77-72 win over the Sabers.

In a quarter final match against Johnson C. Smith, G-W freshman Ben Davis and junior Jeff Binns paved the way to a 61-56 defeat of the Golden Bulls. Davis' 17 points and Binns' timing led the Bulldogs to this comeback win.

Wilkins, with 23 points and 21 rebounds, proved to be a big asset in the semifinal game against Pfeiffer. Davis' bucket with 6:58 left in the game gave the Bulldogs the lead they would not relinquish again in an 83-78 win.

The biggest match-up in the tournament pitted the Bulldogs against the undefeated Limestone College Saints in the finals. The Saints entered the game as defending tournament champions and 10-0 for the season, a record which included a defeat of the Bulldogs earlier in the year.

Ironically, however, the championship match, televised by WBTV, proved to be the easiest win for the Bulldogs who never trailed in the game. The closest Limestone ever came to G-W was 16-15 with 13:33 left in the first half.

Rick Kinney scored 18 points and pulled down 10 rebounds. Additional help came from Camp with 19 points, Davis with 17 points and Vincent Jackson with 12 points.

Wilkins and Camp were named to the All Tournament team, and Wilkins was voted the tournament's Most Valuable Player.
Johnson Becomes Football Coach

From the Bulldogs to the Bulldogs, Gardner-Webb's new football coach has accumulated a wealth of experience in both high school and college ranks. Ellis Johnson, 31, was named Gardner-Webb's new head football coach during a noon press conference on the campus on Jan. 6. He replaces Tom Moore, who accepted the head coaching position at The Citadel after coaching at G-W for four years.

Johnson, G-W's fifth head coach, came from The Citadel, where he coached on the Bulldog staff for the spring and fall seasons of 1982.

Johnson's major responsibilities as assistant coach at The Citadel were coaching the defensive linebackers and recruiting from central South Carolina, central North Carolina and southern Georgia.

His coaching experience began in 1975 after his graduation from The Citadel, where he remained as an assistant to coach the defensive ends. After a year there, he moved to Gaffney High School and a position as defensive coordinator and assistant head coach. His defensive teams at Gaffney were always highly ranked in South Carolina.

Johnson coached at Gaffney from 1976 to 1978 before accepting the assistant coaching position at Spartanburg High School. Again, his major responsibility as assistant was to coordinate the defense.

Johnson became a head coach for the first time in his career when the head coaching position became available at Spartanburg in 1980. His 1980 team went 7-4, and his 1981 team finished 9-4.

After two successful seasons as head coach at Spartanburg, Johnson decided it was time to move to the college ranks and, in 1982, returned to The Citadel to coach the defensive linebackers.

In his college days as a cadet, Johnson played defensive end on the Bulldog team. Three times in his cadet playing career he was tapped as Bulldog defensive player of the week.

At The Citadel, he was coached for two years by Bobby Ross, now head coach at Maryland. During another two years he was coached by Red Parker, now head coach at Delta State.

"Coach Johnson personifies the highest ideals of the collegiate student-athlete," said Dr. Craven Williams, G-W president. "His determination to continue a strong winning football program is surpassed only by his determination to promote the educational progress of his athletes."

At Gardner-Webb, Johnson will be reunited with four players he coached while at Gaffney High School: wide receiver Cameron Brooks, running back Carroll Dawkins and NAIA All-America wide receiver Carlisle Koonts.

Johnson, a native of Winnsboro, S.C., received his B.A. degree in secondary education in 1975 from The Citadel, where he minored in mathematics. He is the son of John T. Johnson and Ernestine Johnson.

Players Named All-America

Three Gardner-Webb College football players have been named to the 1982 NAIA Division I All-America Football Team.

Quarterback Chip Stuart was selected the NAIA's first team quarterback. Wide receiver Cameron Brooks was selected the NAIA's second team receiver. Placekicker Carlisle Koonts was named the NAIA's second team placekicker.

Stuart, Brooks and Koonts led the Bulldogs of Gardner-Webb to their best football season since the college entered senior college competition in 1970.

Never before have three players on any G-W football team made the All-America team in the same year. Gardner-Webb's past All-America players have been offensive tackle Bob Bellick (1975 second team), placekicker Mike Cox (1976 second team), running back Johnny Walker (1977 first team), offensive guard Jeff Carter (1978 first team) and defensive tackle Ralph Warthen (1980 second team).

In 1982, Stuart completed 211 passes for 2,389 yards and threw 23 touchdown passes, statistics which were good enough to rate him as the NAIA's top passer. Stuart, a 6-3, 190-pound senior from Warner-Robins, Ga., completed 58.6 percent of his passes in 1982 as the Bulldogs averaged 265.4 yards through the air. As Gardner-Webb's career leading passer, Stuart completed 648 passes for 7,455 yards and 68 touchdown strikes in four years of college play.

In 1982, Koonts kicked 34 for 34 extra points and was good on 11 of 18 field goal attempts as he led the NAIA in individual kick scoring with 67 points.

Koonts became Gardner-Webb's all-time career scorer in 1982 with 155 career points. He also holds a new NAIA record with the nation's longest extra point string without a miss. The string is 90 PATS in a row (1979-1980).

History Challenged G-W Alumnus

When Bill Miller accepted the task of writing a community history, he felt unprepared and uneasy.

A career in the ministry had taught him many skills in reading the complexities of human behavior on an individual basis, but for the broad view of the historian, he knew he fell far short.

Yet Miller, chaplain of Stowe-Pharr Mills in McAdenville, met the challenge out of a deep commitment to the people of his community. Through his research, he came to know and respect the little town’s past and the people living in it.

In McAdenville, history. The research continued on weekends. The result is a unique account of an equally unique place.

Joe and Lib Kirkpatrick shared the value of living things. They especially loved orchids and took pleasure in growing them.

That pleasure helped the Kirkpatricks through his long and eventually losing battle with leukemia. Joe Kirkpatrick died Dec. 9, 1981, leaving his wife, three sons and six grandchildren. His family still mourns his loss, but they cherish their memories of him.

The Kirkpatricks met while both were students at Gardner-Webb College and married in 1948. At the time they became interested in orchid-growing, they were living in Charlotte, where Kirkpatrick was employed as a salesman for Sears-Roebuck. They visited the Florida Keys in 1965 and returned home with about a dozen orchid plants.

As time passed, their hobby turned into a time-consuming business, and they built their first backyard greenhouse in 1970.

An anticipated blood-donor visit to the Red Cross blood bank in Charlotte resulted in tragic news, however, when pre-donor tests indicated Joe Kirkpatrick was ill. Subsequent testing turned up leukemia in June 1978.

Kirkpatrick battled the disease for three years, long after he and his wife moved to Fort Lawn, S.C.

"Joe is a fighter," Mrs. Kirkpatrick said in a March 1981 interview with the Lancaster, S.C., newspaper. "He hasn't quit. He is a volunteer fireman at Fort Lawn now.

Kirkpatrick battled illness, Kirkpatrick had occasional periods when his strength returned. "Some days are good when I feel like I'm 35," he said in the same interview. "Then there are other days when I don't feel like getting up—like I'm 95. And, I'm afraid I don't have many of the 35 days now."

Elliott White Springs Memorial Hospital in Lancaster became a familiar place. So did Duke University Hospital. But the Kirkpatricks continued to grow their orchids.

They built a greenhouse in their side yard only weeks after moving to Fort Lawn. Later, a second greenhouse was constructed. The Kirkpatricks realized no profit but found much enjoyment in the work.

The hospital where Kirkpatrick was so often hospitalized frequently received orchids. So did his doctor's office.

Lib Kirkpatrick also found time to campaign for and win the office of mayor of Fort Lawn. She resigned the post after her husband's death. He had wanted her to get back to other interests.

Joe Kirkpatrick knew illness and pain during the last years of his life, but his faith never faltered. "My God," he said, "has been good to me."

Mineral Collection Donated

Students in James W. Ray’s earth science classes in the late 1960s noticed their teacher’s keen interest in rocks and minerals. He loved to trap outdoors and explore the world’s wonders with them. Sometimes he felt more a student than a teacher.

Minerals, especially, caught Ray’s eye. He began taking specimens back to school and, later, to his home. They would be where he kept them. Eventually, he put the minerals on display in his home.

As Ray’s collection grew, he began thinking he would share a portion of it with others. This led to his decision to donate the 554-item collection to Gardner-Webb College’s science department.

Mineral-collecting became an absorbing hobby for Ray. The collection got so large he began thinking he would share a portion of it with others. This led to his decision to donate the 554-item collection to Gardner-Webb College’s science department.

And so on, all around the world. “I collect mainly for beauty,” says Ray. “It’s a hobby—nothing professional.”

Ray is a Pennsylvania native and a 1958 graduate of Western North Carolina University. For 15 years, he taught in public schools in Virginia and North Carolina. He holds a graduate degree in social studies from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Ray was easy prey to the fascination minerals offer. “I grew up in a city,” he says. “I had no idea about minerals.” The collection began modestly. Around, 1974, Ray joined an international mineral club. “I really got serious then,” he says. “I started trading and that started me off.”

Micro-minerals are Ray’s specialty. “I accumulated quite a number,” he says. “They were in the basement, upstairs, everywhere.” Eventually, he had between 10,000 and 12,000 specimens stored in boxes. He used some in school, had a few displays, but mostly Ray enjoyed his mineral collection. If he were to lose his collection, he would say his favorite piece was the rainbow pyromorphite. He used to say that every year the rainbow was the same. He loved that idea. Ray says that the earth’s mineral resources are a part of human history and that we should take care of them.

Ray thought of Gardner-Webb where his son is majoring in religious education.

Although Ray is parting with part of his minerals, his collection continues. The hobby takes him from Massachusetts to Kentucky and Georgia. Hunting is not as easy as it was when he started. Getting into quarries is more difficult now with the companies tightening controls.

Still, Ray goes off on his field trips, searching fields and quarries that he finds open, eyes out for small wonders. Silver minerals are high on his interest list now.

Once bitten, the mineral collector can’t quit. He is an eternal student.
