President Craven E. Williams Resigns

Dr. Craven E. Williams, president of Gardner-Webb College since August 1, 1976, has submitted his resignation as President, to the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees.

The executive committee acted on his resignation at their regularly scheduled meeting July 25.

Hobart Smith of Charlotte, chairman of the board of trustees, who will also chair the search committee, announced the following trustees as members of the search committee:

George Blanton, Jr., chairman of the board, The First National Bank of Shelby, N.C.

Lloyd Bost, president of Bost Bakery, Shelby, N.C.

Dr. Paul Craven, pastor of First Baptist Church, Winston-Salem, N.C.

Ann Hardy, alumna and trustee, Greensboro, N.C.

Bernard Parker, vice president, Nationwide Insurance, Raleigh, N.C.

Dr. Timothy Pennell, professor of surgery, Bowman-Gray School of Medicine, Winston-Salem, N.C. In submitting his resignation to Board

Chairman Hobart Smith of Charlotte, Williams said, "I have been a college administrator and/or a teacher for twenty years. I have been part of a major private university, a women's college, a men's college and a co-educational college. Now, I have been president of a private, church-related college for 10 years. It is a good time for Gardner-Webb College to continue its growth and development under new leadership, and it is a good time for me and my family to pursue other interests and opportunities."

Williams' plans involve moving to Raleigh, North Carolina, where he will become president of Dominion Corporation. This corporation will be involved in land development, new construction, property management and other personal and family ventures. The company will begin operations primarily in the Raleigh area, but will expand into other parts of the state and region.

Beth Williams, wife of Dr. Williams and a partner in the Shelby real estate firm of Horn, Story and Williams, will become an associate of Springmoor, Inc., a new $25 million Life-Care Retirement Community in Raleigh.

"It is difficult to find the right time for such a move," said Williams. "However, over the last eight to nine months, I have become convinced that this would be as appropriate a time as could be available. We have completed the master campus plan and major renovations are either underway or in definite planning stages. The strength of the faculty and staff is clearly apparent. The shared governance structures are in operation.

Special, new academic programs, such as GOAL, graduate, nursing, developmental, and programs for the deaf and blind, are well established as parts of our on-going educational programs. The nursing program in Statesville is now firmly established. Furthermore, in the spring of 1986, we will complete our 10 year self-study for the Southern Association of colleges and universities. This means the new president will have full and current information about the college's last 10 years, and a carefully outlined and objectively criticized blue print for the future.

"Change is an inevitable and a necessary part of an institution, as well as an individual. It is now time for a change.

"Beth, Jay, Lee and I have enjoyed wonderful and exciting years at Gardner-Webb College and in this community. The people who make up the College and who stand with the college in all its activities have been ideal companions, colleagues and friends. This college has a dynamic future, because it has the right people who believe in it and work for its welfare. It has been our privilege to work with such people and for such a worthy cause."

In addition, Smith announced a search process which will involve direct contributions to the committee's work from representatives of the college faculty and staff, the Student Government Association, the alumni association, the board of advisors, the ministerial board of associates and the Bulldog Club.

"We will conduct the most thorough search possible for the next president," Smith said. "We are eager to have input from our constituents and will take the necessary time to find just the right person."

Combs Urges Graduates to Have Confidence

Linda Morrison Combs urged graduates to strive for excellence in her commencement speech at Gardner-Webb College's 78th exercises. Mrs. Combs, deputy undersecretary for management in the United States department of education, also received the honorary doctor of humanities degree from the college during the ceremony.

"To live your life to the fullest, you must attain the maximum development of your talents," Mrs. Combs told graduates. "Excellence, for each of us, means having confidence in what we can do. It means climbing the steps one at a time."

Mrs. Combs holds an associate's degree from Gardner-Webb College, and both a bachelor's and a master's degree from Appalachian State University.

"Linda Combs has served the cause of education throughout her career," G-W President Craven Williams said. "Her commitment to education is reflected in the responsible positions she has held. Her appointment by President Reagan clearly indicates that this alumna has achieved at the highest level of her profession."

Before being appointed to her present position with the department of education, Mrs. Combs served in several positions including manager of the National Direct Student Loan department for Wachovia Services, Inc., and as a teacher, reading coordinator, assistant principal and member of the board of education for Winston-Salem/Forsyth county schools.

Linda Morrison Combs receives the honorary doctor of humanities degree from Dr. John Drayer (l), vice president for academic affairs and Dr. Craven Williams, G-W president.

As part of the exercises, 324 graduate and undergraduate degrees were given, a dean emeritus was named and two administrative staff members were recognized.

"These exercises climaxed a very successful year for this college," Williams said. "We celebrate the achievements of our students and reflect gratefully on the contribution which several individuals have made to the life and well being of the college."

Eleven graduate degrees, 222 bachelor of science degrees, 62 bachelor of arts degrees and 29 associate degrees were given.

Terrell Named Dean Emeritus

Gardner-Webb College named its first dean emeritus at commencement exercises May 11.

James O. Terrell of Boiling Springs, who served G-W for 26 years as dean and professor of history, was honored as dean emeritus. The G-W faculty unanimously approved the recommendation of the department of social sciences that Terrell be given emeritus standing.

"His service was distinguished by great care for students and his love for teaching," said Dr. John Drayer, vice president for academic affairs. "This is the first dean emeritus award we've ever given. It is our way of saying thank you."

Terrell received the honorary doctor of humanities degree from G-W in 1974. He holds a bachelor's degree from Western Carolina University and a master's degree from George Peabody College. He was honored by Western Carolina in 1932 with the Best College Citizen Award and in 1958 with the Distinguished Alumnus Award.

He is listed in Who's Who in American Education, 1959-62 and Who's Who in the South and Southwest, 1963-64.

"Dr. Terrell had a calm and methodical way of solving problems and projecting programs," said G-W President Craven E. Williams. "He had the confidence and respect of students and faculty and contributed significantly to the development of our educational program."

A Gentleman and Scholar

One morning in May, 1985, there was an editorial in The Atlanta Constitution which read, "The United States Senate has lost much distinction with the passing of North Carolina's Senator Clyde R. Hoey. His death removes a link with the past when lawmakers were distinguished as gentlemen and scholars and lived and looked the part. The nation joins North Carolina in mourning his passing."

One of our great political leaders thirty years ago, who was a Shelby resident, was recognized throughout the United States as a gentleman and a scholar. The editor of a leading daily newspaper said that "he lived and looked the part."

One of the products of a liberal arts education is that it enhances a person's sense of ethics and etiquette.

What is ethics? Ethics has to do with the "science of moral duty" or "moral practice." It is one's ability to distinguish between what is right and what is wrong. It is embedded in a person's conscience, and in the conscience of a society. It determines modes and standards of conduct which are generally acceptable or unacceptable.

Etiquette means "the forms required by good breeding," or "proper rules of decorum." Ethics is what is right. Etiquette is a gracious way to do something. Both are important in the conduct of business and social activities.

There appears to be a mood, an atmosphere which penetrates every aspect of our society, and which does not encourage us to be either gentlemanly or scholarly in our approach to life. So, the tendency is to ignore both ethics and etiquette in public performance on the part of too many people.

Could it be that in education we have of necessity become too busy teaching our youth about the techniques and technicalities involved in our new technological world of communications? Have we been blinded to the values of poise, moral rightness, fair evaluation of facts, the need for more praise and inspiration rather than criticism and abusive use of political and economic power?

The basic courses of studies at Gardner-Webb College for students who earn a degree in the liberal arts is about the same emphasis today as it was years ago. However, fewer and fewer students, proportionally, are earning degrees in the liberal arts. More and more students are majoring on learning how to be skilled specialists in scientific and technological fields of endeavor.

It may be that in order for us to cope with the rapidly increasing complexities of our time we need more people like Clyde R. Hoey who can act the part of both "gentleman and scholar," taking a steady, level-headed, scholarly approach; and acting graciously when in public life.

The achievement of this is a responsibility for all who shape the personality, minds, and conduct of youth today. It begins in the home with parents, extends into the public and private schools at all levels, and becomes more significant in our colleges and universities. It is certainly an objective we have for our students at Gardner-Webb.

James O. Terrell of Boiling Springs, N.C. was named dean emeritus at commencement. Terrell served the college for 26 years as dean and professor of history.

Robert Abrams, who retired from his position as registrar June 30, and Janelle Hicks, who retired in February of this year, were given silver trays by the college commending their service.

Before coming to G-W in 1945, Terrell served 21 years as a teacher and principal in the public school systems of Jackson and Buncombe counties. He was a teacher and principal at Oakley high school in Biltmore, N.C. and a principal at Woodfin high school in Asheville, NC. His wife, Rubye Reynolds Terrell, also taught school in Buncombe county.

A native of Whittier, N.C. in Jackson county, Terrell is the son of the late Joel Kenner Terrell and Viola B. Cooper Terrell.

The J. O. Terrell medal for history was established at G-W in 1973 with funds from Terrell. It is given by the social science department annually to recognize a student for high achievement in the area of history. The Terrells established the Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Terrell loan fund at G-W in 1954 to provide financial assistance to those students who without such assistance would be unable to continue their education.

Terrell was a member of the National Education Association, the North Carolina Education Association and was the 1959 president of the southwestern group of the Higher Education Division of the NCEA, Hickory division. For several years, he was a member of the Mississippi Valley Historical Association and a member of the Cleveland County Schoolmasters Club.

Dr. J.O. Terrell is named Dean Emeritus and is given a plaque commemorating his service to the college.

The 1954 G-W annual was dedicated to Terrell.

He was a charter member of the Boiling Springs United Methodist Church where he is still an active member. He has served as chairman of the administrative board, as a member of the board of trustees, as treasurer and as a teacher of adults and young people.

Terrell has visited 48 of the 50 United States of America and has traveled in Canada, Europe and the Middle East.

New Manager, New Location for Bookstore

Under new management, the Gardner-Webb bookstore, now located in the Charles I. Dover building on campus, will move to Main Street across from the college in Boiling Springs.

Freida Collins of Shelby has been named the new bookstore manager by G-W President Craven Williams. Mrs. Collins owned Freida's Books in Shelby before coming to G-W.

The bookstore will be expanding into a three phase operation of college texts, college and other gift items and a general bookstore, according to Barry Hartis, vice president for business and finance.

"My bookstore will be incorporated into the Gardner-Webb bookstore," Mrs. Collins said. "It will be an expansion of what I did at my store, but on a larger scale. I still will do reviews for the book clubs and will do special orders. We will have the same atmosphere."

Dr. Williams said of the move, "We are excited about the opportunity to expand our college bookstore into the kind of store which will provide books, magazines and distinctive gift items. Mrs. Collins's love of books and literature will enable us to provide very distinctive services."

Hartis said that the bookstore is being moved in order to better serve the general public. "This location will make us more accessible to the community, even as we continue our services to the college community," Hartis said. "We are gearing our retail efforts not to be a direct competitor with the other businesses in town."

"It will be an interface between Gardner-Webb and the community," Mrs. Collins added.

The bookstore will be expanding the lines of merchandise it already carries including the personal reading section. It will also add items like software and specialty gift items, according to Hartis.

Mrs. Collins was educated at Lees McRae College, Gaston College and at the Freida Collins in front of new bookstore.

University of North Carolina at Charlotte. Before opening her bookstore in Shelby, she worked as a manager for Waldenbooks in both Shelby and Gastonia.

The Gardner-Webb College Pooled Life Income Fund

The Gardner-Webb College Pooled Life Income Fund provides an opportunity to support the goals of the college while retaining life income for the donor and/or a beneficiary.

Donors to the Gardner-Webb College Pooled Life Income Fund will:

1. Obtain an immediate income tax deduction for a portion of the gift.
2. Receive income for life for the donor and/or a beneficiary.
3. Avoid paying capital gains tax when giving long term appreciated assets.
4. Have the satisfaction of helping to assure that Gardner-Webb College will continue to grow in Christian service and influence.

Upon the death of the last beneficiary under a particular pooled life income fund agreement, the principal of the gift is made available to the College for its general purposes or for the purpose designated by the donor. An initial gift in the amount of $1000 or more may be used to establish a pooled life income agreement. Additional gifts of $500 or more may be added at any time.

Assuring the future of Gardner-Webb College

Breakfast Inaugurates Charlotte Office

Proposed educational budget cuts that would slash $836 million from student aid next year are already causing administrators in higher education to take an active stance in recruitment of students and funds.

Competition for students and funds would increase if the cuts are passed. Therefore, Gardner-Webb College in Boiling Springs, N.C. has opted to expand its Charlotte operation by opening an office and classrooms on West Woodlawn Road off I-77.

Twelve percent of G-W's 1984-85 students were from Mecklenburg county and 3.6 percent of G-W's alumni are now living in the county.

The office opened recently with an inaugural breakfast. Those present for the breakfast included Hobart Smith, chairman of the G-W board of trustees and president of Hobart Smith Companies of Charlotte.

"In Mecklenburg county last year, there was an 8.9 percent growth in new housing development. In order for Gardner-Webb to expand, we needed a more visible presence in the city and this office gives us that presence," Smith said.

Also attending the breakfast was Jim Williamson a member of the Gardner Webb alumni board of directors and a partner with Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co., a CPA firm in Charlotte. "We think the office is going to make a very positive difference for us," Williamson said. "A high percentage of Gardner-Webb's student enrollment came from this county last year and we want to increase that number."

For four years, G-W has taught classes in Mecklenburg county through the evening college satellite program, Greater Opportunities for Adult Learners (GOAL). The classes have been held at Garringer high school in the past. The new office and classrooms will give GOAL classes a permanent location to meet each semester.

Evans Whitaker, G-W director of development, Mecklenburg division, will operate the office. Whitaker, a 1983 G-W graduate, has already established the Gardner-Webb Club at the Charlotte office. The club is for former G-W students from the county and will meet quarterly.

G-W will focus a major part of its public relations, development and GOAL activities in Charlotte through the office.

"Mecklenburg county residents have been an important part of the history and development of this college," said G-W President Craven Williams. "We are grateful for the opportunity to expand our work here."

M. Henry Garrity, G-W vice president for development said, "Our Charlotte operation enables us to meet the leaders of western North Carolina on their home grounds."

"Charlotte is the financial capital of the mid-south as well as our largest population center. We can serve Charlotte better from our new location. Twenty-five percent of my time for the immediate future will be spent in the Charlotte operation."

Nancy Kistler, a G-W trustee and manager of Scotland Colony apartments in Charlotte said of the office, "Gardner-Webb has something to offer that no other school I know of has. I think its tremendous that we'll have a place to participate in the program without having to drive to Boiling Springs to do it."

Dr. Williams explains the necessity of the Charlotte office to staff members and trustees in the meeting room at Charlotte.

Heritage Club Dinner a Success

The second annual Heritage Club dinner held April 16 was a success according to George Blanton, Jr., chairman of the endowment development committee, who said 50 people attended.

The dinner was held in Gardner-Webb President Craven William's home and was hosted by the Williams and the Blantons. Membership in the club has grown from 105 to 157 persons during the past year.

The Heritage Club includes persons who have made gifts to the endowment or named the college in their wills, insurance programs or charitable trusts. Spouses are automatically included in membership.

For more information about G-W's Heritage Club or ways to include G-W in your estate plans, contact Max Padgett, director of endowment development. Gardner-Webb College, Boiling Springs, N.C. 28017 or call (704) 434-2361.

L.T. Hamrick (r) and Forrest Feezor enjoy the second annual Heritage Club Dinner at President Williams' home. Mr. and Mrs. John Ed Davis are served in the back.

Mr. William Y. Webb of Washington, D.C. receives a handshake and certificate of membership into the Heritage Club at the dinner.

Last Issue's Winners

Winners of "Those Were the Years" in the winter Web were: Tamara C. Campbell of Charlotte, Carolyn J. Hicks of Charlotte, Leonard Pressley of Glenville, N.C. and Rebecca A. Daves of Welford, S.C.

They correctly identified Max Crowder, Joan Parker, John Jennings and Jack Gantt as the sophomore class officers.

Donated Teletypewriters to Help Deaf Students

The Foothills Council of the Pioneers of America, a community service organization that is in conjunction with the Bell system, has donated to Gardner-Webb College two reconditioned teletypewriter machines to be used by deaf students as telecommunications devices.

Carol Rellick, director of the G-W program for the hearing impaired, was instrumental in the machines being donated to the college. She telephoned Keith McNeal, a Bell system employee, and informed him of problems with the teletypewriter machine the program was then using. McNeal put Ms. Rellick in touch with the telephone Pioneers, who secured the two reconditioned machines.

Two lifetime members of the Pioneers, Charlie Henderson and H. G. "Red" Black, delivered the machines to the G-W campus. Diane Blanton, community services chairperson for the Foothills council, made the presentation of the machines to the college.

The Bell system donates teletypewriter machines that are considered obsolete for their use. The machines are repaired and cleaned by Bell technicians in their off time and also by retired technicians. The repair work is done in the South Street repair room in Gastonia and also on location in the private residences of hearing impaired people making use of machines donated by the Foothills council members.

The Foothills council, one of 10 councils in North Carolina, comprises six Piedmont counties, including Cleveland and Gaston counties. In Gaston county alone, 25 teletypewriter machines have been placed in the residences of deaf people.

According to Nancy Smith, president of the Foothills council, each member must have 18 or more years of service with the Bell system, as is the case with the Pioneers of America organization nationwide. Once a member retires from the Bell system, he automatically becomes a lifetime member of the Pioneers.

Library Receives Materials to Aid Deaf Program

Alumni and Friends

Kilby Named Admissions Director

Randy Kilby of Boiling Springs, N.C. has been promoted from associate director of admissions to director of admissions and enrollment planning at Gardner-Webb College.

Kilby will be filling the position vacated by Rick Holbrook, admissions director at G-W since 1977.

"Rick has done a superb job in setting precedents," Kilby said. "He is one of the most knowledgeable admissions directors in the southeast and I am fortunate to have worked under him."

Kilby has worked in G-W admissions as a recruiter since the fall of 1979. He graduated from G-W in 1979 with a double degree in business and sociology.

"I've seen what Gardner-Webb can do from a personal standpoint," Kilby said. "I accepted the position because of a love for the college."

Kilby also accepted the position because of the challenge. He has several ideas that he wants to introduce, but as an admissions director, he knows the main goal is to identify prospective students and acquaint them with Gardner-Webb.

"Showing G-W to someone often means eventual enrollment, which is the bottom line," Kilby said.

Praising Kilby's promotion, Dr. Craven Williams, president of G-W, said, "Randy Kilby was an obvious choice for this vital appointment. His work experience, his demonstrated effectiveness, and his tireless energy are surpassed only by his total devotion to the college. I am confident that he will continue the outstanding performances characteristic of this important office."

As a recruiter, Kilby worked with youth groups in North and South Carolina. He plans to continue his speaking engagements with hopes that G-W can have an even closer working relationship with churches.

Randy Kilby

His new ideas include staff development. Kilby wants to match the expertise of his personnel with the duties of the admissions office.

"We have some of the finest professionals that I know of," he said. Their special personalities blended with unique skill will give added strength to the office."

Kilby worked at Miller Funeral Home as funeral director and assistant manager before attending G-W. Throughout his connection with G-W, he has spoken to youth and adults in conferences, revivals, banquets and seminars in the United States and abroad.

Kilby was named to "Who's Who Among American High Schools" and to "Who's Who Among American Colleges and Universities."

He is the son of Rev. and Mrs. G.L. Kilby of Swannanoa, N.C.

Christian Service Organization Meets

Garland Hendricks, director of the B.E. Morris Academy for Christian studies, spoke to the Christian Service Organization (CSO) at a recent banquet. CSO Director Sam O'Neal was pleased with the participation at the event.

Sarah Ann Hobbs to be Honored

Sarah Ann Hobbs of Raleigh, N.C. will receive the honorary doctor of divinity degree at the Gardner-Webb College Aug. 29 fall convocation. Miss Hobbs will also be the guest speaker at the service.

G-W President Craven Williams will award the degree recommended by the board of trustees and the faculty of the college.

"Sarah Ann Hobbs has, in her personal and professional life, reflected the values for which this college stands," Dr. Williams said. "She has devoted her life to the church and its efforts to serve people in God's name. As this college honors Miss Hobbs it reconfirms its dedication to the mission of the church."

Miss Hobbs holds a bachelor's degree from Judson College, a master's degree from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary and an honorary doctorate from Judson College.

She is the administrative director for the division of missions for the North Carolina Baptist State Convention. As director, she is in charge of departments that focus on eight specific areas of missions.

Miss Hobbs has also worked with the convention as director of estate planning for the Baptist foundation and as executive director of the women's missionary union.

She has served on the mission support commission and the commission on volunteers for the Baptist State Convention. The mission support commission was an appointed study committee that adopted the N.C. Baptist Bold Mission Thrust and the commission on volunteers was an appointed study committee that studied how North Carolinians enlisted to volunteer for short-term service in the states and abroad.

With the Southern Baptist Convention, Miss Hobbs has served in the Christian Service Corps in Alaska and as a representative on the North American Baptist fellowship committee.

Denominational Differences Set Aside for Joint Ordination

When Episcopal priest Doug Puckett graduated from Gardner-Webb College in 1975, he probably never thought he would have to learn the Eskimo language or help ordain a Baptist deacon.

He has done both, though, in the ten years that have come and gone since he was handed his bachelor's degree at G-W.

It was on the evening of Palm Sunday in March that Rev. Puckett, vicar of St. George's and St. Paul's Episcopal Churches in Shenandoah, Va., was invited to participate in the ordination of his brother, Timothy B. Puckett. The ceremony was held at Dan Valley Baptist Church in Stoneville, N.C.

"I congratulate you as both my real brother and as a brother of common faith that knows no bounds of denominational differences, but is united in Jesus Christ," Rev. Puckett told his brother at the service.

Rev. Puckett participated in the laying on of hands ceremony. He also read the consecration prayer for deacons from the Episcopal prayer book during his sermon.

"The joint ordination service, while respecting the discipline and doctrinal differences of each denomination, makes a step forward on a long road back from disunity," Rev. Puckett said.

Relations between the two denominations have often been strained since 1611 when ex-Anglican priest Thomas Helwys, influenced by Anabaptist and Mennonite teachings, organized the first Baptist church in London.

Since his G-W graduation, Rev. Puckett has attended Lutheran Southern Seminary and graduated from General Episcopal Seminary in New York, New York.

Rev. Puckett's first assignment in the Episcopal Church was to serve as an assistant in the Eskimo Anglican Church at Arctic Canada. There, he ministered to French Canadians in the Eskimo language.

"My informal tutor in the Eskimo language was a man on the vestry board at the church," Rev. Puckett said. "He didn't speak any English. I went to his home a couple of times a week and he would point to things to teach me. That was my on-the-job training."

Rev. Puckett also said that he learned to pronounce words from a few textbooks he was loaned and by having to read aloud in the Episcopal prayer book that was written in the Eskimo language.

He took a position in mission work at Columbia, S.C. after his work in Arctic Canada. He has worked in the two rural churches in Shenandoah, Va., where he serves now, for almost three years.

Rev. Puckett is married to Linda Bedenbaugh Puckett. The Pucketts have one daughter, Caroline.

Tenure Granted

The Gardner-Webb College board of trustees granted tenure to two faculty members recently during their quarterly meeting. Receiving tenure were Robert Decker and Timothy Cherry.

Robert Decker Timothy Cherry

"The receipt of the terminal degree for each of these faculty members was crucial to their getting tenure," said Dr. John Drayer, vice president for academic affairs. "We are very proud that both recently completed their doctoral work. It is significant that they did this additional study with no sacrifice of their teaching and classroom responsibility."

Decker, who has been with the college since 1970, is an associate professor of music. He received a bachelor's degree from the University of Miami, a master's degree from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, a master's degree from Appalachian State University and a doctorate from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Before coming to Gardner-Webb, Decker was the minister of music and education at Elizabeth Baptist Church in Shelby, N.C.

Cherry, who has been with the college since 1981, is an assistant professor of art. He received both a bachelor's degree and master's degree from Appalachian State University and a doctorate from North Texas State University.

Before coming to Gardner-Webb, Cherry was a teaching fellow and assistant in design at North Texas State University. He also taught art in the public schools of Lincolnton, N.C. and Charleston, S.C. for seven years.

The tenure process at Gardner-Webb, according to Dr. Drayer, centers on the teaching excellence of the faculty members and their devotion to the teaching of their discipline.

Dan Proctor Promoted

Dan Proctor has been named assistant academic vice president for administration at Gardner-Webb College. Proctor was previously director of records and research at the college.

In the new position, Proctor, who holds a doctor of philosophy degree, will be in charge of registration, academic budget management, computer service, academic programs, academic policy implementation, the college catalog and internal/external reports of the college. He will work closely with Dr. John Drayer, vice president for academic affairs.

"Dr. Proctor brings to these duties a wealth of experience, ability, and knowledge of higher education," Drayer said. "This combination will prove invaluable in the qualitative growth anticipated at Gardner-Webb."

Proctor came to Gardner-Webb in 1969 as the director of guidance and counseling. He has also taught Biblical languages and literature and has served as registrar at G-W.

He holds an associate's degree from Southwest Baptist College and a bachelor's degree from Howard Payne College. He has also earned a bachelor's degree and both a doctor of theology and a doctor of philosophy degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

His wife, Launita Proctor, who holds a doctor of philosophy degree, is a professor of health education and physical education at G-W. The Proctors have four children.

Memorial Gardens Dedicated

Memorial gardens planted in honor of three Gardner-Webb professors were dedicated April 21.

The services were held at the original boiling springs on campus.

Faculty members and students at Gardner-Webb planted the gardens to honor three faculty who were killed in a car wreck two years ago. The three were Dr. Michael A. Harrelson, Dr. James T. Henson, and Dr. John W. Rast.

"The garden idea originated for Mike (Harrelson), he was a field botanist, but Dr. Craven Williams, the college president, felt it appropriate to have it for all the professors," said Dr. Tom Jones, assistant professor of biology. "Most of the plants can be found in our area, within 100 miles."

Faculty Honored for Long-Time Service

Faculty members honored by Dr. Williams at Awards Day for 15 years of service were (l to r) Mary Jones, Sherman Parrish, Marie Martin, Gordon Washburn and Robert Decker.

Five Gardner-Webb faculty and staff members were recognized at Awards Day for their long-time service to the college.

Receiving a framed print of the Hamrick building for 15 years of service to the college were: Marie Martin, director of financial aid; Gordon Washburn, director of security and traffic; and Mary Jones, technical processing assistant in the library.

Also receiving 15-year service awards were: Dr. Robert Decker, associate professor of music and Dr. Sherman Parrish, professor of chemistry.

Biology Majors to Study Shrimp and Water Control

Angela Burcham of Mt. Airy, N.C. and Shirley Conner of Rutherfordton, N.C., rising seniors in Gardner-Webb's department of natural sciences, have been accepted into the North Carolina State Government summer internship program.

The biology majors were selected from over 200 applicants.

"The whole department is very proud of these two and this indicates the quality of work they have done," said Dr. Barbara Burkett, chairman of the department of natural sciences. "They are both very knowledgeable in their fields."

Miss Burcham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kit Burcham of Mt. Airy, will study the migration of brown shrimp at the Division of Marine Fisheries in Morehead City, N.C.

Miss Conner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Conner of Rutherfordton, will study quality water control with the environment management department in Raleigh, N.C.

Alumni Survey

We are changing our alumni records to a new comprehensive computer program, thus we want to make sure the information we have on you is accurate. Our knowledge of your current status is important to the college and can be important to you.

Many alumni have been suggested for special awards, positions or assignments based on information in our files. Other alumni have been called upon to represent Gardner-Webb at official functions. Some alumni have asked us to find friends long lost since college days. The different schools and departments are acutely aware of the need to communicate with their alumni.

The success we enjoy in responding to your informational needs and those of the college community is largely due to the splendid cooperation we receive in the completion of this questionnaire. WE APPRECIATE YOUR COOPERATION AND WILL NOT RELEASE INFORMATION TO INDIVIDUALS OR ORGANIZATIONS FOR THE PURPOSE OF POLITICAL OR COMMERCIAL GAIN. OR WHERE WE FEEL THE RELEASE OF INFORMATION MAY INFRINGE UPON THE PRIVACY OF THE ALUMNUS.

Thank you and best wishes.

1985 Bulldog Football Outlook Optimistic

A pressurized defense with 11 starters returning and new faces in the offensive line have made Gardner-Webb head football coach Woody Fish optimistic about the 1985 season.

To top off a successful recruiting season, Fish announced the signing of several freshman and college transfer players.

Four major college transfers signed by the Bulldogs are quarterback Jesse James from Guilford College, offensive lineman William Stevenson from N.C. State, and kicker Pete Walker from Western Carolina. These players participated in spring football drills for G-W along with junior college transfers Chris Medford, an offensive lineman from Lees-McRae, and Charlie Poole, an offensive lineman from Chowan College. Incoming freshman linebacker Tom Skews from Rock Hill, S.C. and offensive lineman Thurman Leach from Fuquay-Varina, N.C. also participated in spring practice.

Other newcomers to the Bulldogs roster in 1985 are Joe Jiles, an all-region defensive back who transferred from Lees-McRae; Anthony Hailstock, a defensive lineman from J. L. Mann high school in Greenville, S.C. who was named "Lineman of the Year" by The State newspaper of Columbia, S.C.; Kelvin Richardson, a wide receiver from Byrnes high school in Greenville, S.C. who was fourth in the nation in receptions as he set a S.C. high school record; and Wes Hill, an offensive lineman from Smithfield Selma high school in Selma, N.C. who participated in the East-West Coaches All-Star football game.

The Bulldogs defense, with its pressurized style of play, will cause many headaches for the opposition this season and will provide Bulldog fans with an exciting brand of defensive football.

Coach Fish is looking for great improvement from the Bulldog offense also in 1985, as G-W has switched from the "I" formation to the split back veer.

The offensive line looks much improved with starters Daryl Strong, Brian Wood, and Jim Chappell returning along with the addition of newcomers Medford, Poole, and Leach.

The backfield returns two-year starter Al Bianco for his senior season at quarterback. Running back Walter Hardnett returns after sitting out last season with a knee injury. Hardnett set a single game rushing record of 303 yards against Wofford during his freshman campaign. Tony Campbell and Curtis Pressley will also see action in the backfield.

The kicking duties will be taken care of by sophomore Mark Greene and Western Carolina transfer Pete Walker. Punting will be done by Al Bianco or transfer Jesse James.

The Bulldogs return 26 lettermen this season, with eleven starters on defense and six on offense. This provides a strong nucleus for what should be an improved team in 1985.

G-W Athletes Honored

New G-W Bulldog Designed

Gardner-Webb College has a new Runnin' Bulldog. Dwight Reid, G-W graphics designer, created the new logo to give the college a uniform mascot.

"The old Bulldogs that were being used were not consistent because we were using clip art from companies," Reid said. "We wanted something that could be used by all sports and be recognized as Gardner-Webb's Bulldog so I designed this new one."

The new Runnin' Bulldog has already been added to the floor of the Paul Porter Arena on campus and it will replace any other Bulldog previously used at G-W.

Nucleus of Team Returns in 85-86

The 1985-86 Gardner-Webb Runnin' Bulldog basketball team will once again field a powerful team. They have all the necessary ingredients and through hard work and dedication, head coach Jim Wiles hopes to blend this year's team into a district contender.

Last season's team had a better than expected season, reaching the District 26 playoffs. According to Wiles, the team was one of his most successful and the nucleus of the team returns for the 1985-86 season.

The primary weapon in the Bulldog attack is 6-4 senior guard Ben Davis, who has shown versatility throughout his G-W career playing at point guard, second guard and small forward. Davis, a unanimous first team All-District and honorable mention All-American, led District 26 in free throw shooting, ranked third in scoring and was among the leaders in field goal percentage last season.

Junior 6-6 wing Duvall McCleskey also returns for the Bulldogs. McCleskey's play in the past two seasons has shown his potential for being an innovative scorer and a fine all-around player.

Another standout wing in the Bulldog camp is 6-6 junior Grady Martin. Martin's quickness and defensive skills make him G-W's top defensive player. According to Wiles, he could see considerable playing time at both the wing and post positions.

Other key returnees are Aaron Patterson and Brad Smith. Their play at the point guard position exceeded expectations last season. Patterson, a junior, provided veteran-like leadership as well as excellent defensive play. He also showed the ability to make the clutch shot in pressure situations.

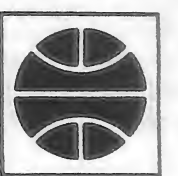

Sophomore Smith displayed an uncanny ability to be at the right place at the right time either making a steal, deflecting a pass, or pulling down a key offensive rebound. Matt Gibson, back from a serious ankle injury, and transfer Chris Brown will also provide seasoned depth at the point guard position.

The key to a rejuvenated Bulldog fast break could be incoming big men Sam Tyson and Stan Easterling. Tyson, a 6-7 transfer from Mercer University, could become a dominant factor towards the success of the Bulldogs inside game. Easterling, a 6-8 freshman, will also be counted on to contribute.

Providing depth at the post position will be 6-8 redshirt Joey Renfro and 6-8 freshman transfer Randy Grayson. Norman Francis, a 6-6 forward from England, could also become an impact player in the Bulldog program.

Baseball Bulldogs Reach Playoffs

Gardner-Webb's baseball team accomplished a feat this year which the previous eight teams could not. The Bulldogs, for the first time since 1976, participated in the District 26 playoffs.

Gardner-Webb finished the regular season in third place behind Elon College and High Point College.

Only two years ago the Bulldogs were 4-25 overall and 2-14 in the district. Last season the Bulldogs narrowly missed a playoff berth and with the addition of some good, young talent this season made it to the first round.

In the playoffs the Bulldogs fell victim to their youth, only mustering nine hits in two losses to High Point and Atlantic Christian College, and losing 6-0 and 8-2 respectively. Second year coach Ozzie McFarland felt that the two losses were not indicative of the team's talent. "We've got a much better hitting team than what we showed in Greensboro. I think we were a little tight, especially at the plate," he said.

However, the Bulldogs return 30 of 31 players and with a few recruits could enjoy an even better season next year. "I really feel that this team can accomplish much more than they did this season," Coach McFarland said. "Sure, we made the playoffs, but with the talent we have, our goals for the future can be much higher. When and if this team realizes the potential they have and work towards it, we can improve at an even greater rate."

The talent that McFarland speaks of includes: Gary Cox, a rising senior who hit .358, scored 21 runs, had 38 hits with 4 doubles, 2 triples, 3 home runs, 28 RBIs and stole seven bases in eight attempts; rising junior Jeff Spargo who batted .371, scored 20 runs, had 36 hits with 9 doubles, 1 triple and 10 home runs; Neal Cargile, the one senior on the squad batted .349, stole 11 bases, scored 32 runs, and had 37 hits with 11 doubles, 3 triples and 7 home runs.

Mark Ellis, one of the best defensive catchers in the district, contributed to the offense with a .329 batting average. Rising senior Greg Eller and junior Brett Bridges both had off years and will be counted on to produce as they did in 1984 when Eller hit .351 and Bridges hit .290, according to McFarland.

Also, rising junior Mike Cheek, rising sophomore Jeff Bates, and rising junior Tommy Turner are capable of hitting .300 or better, McFarland says.

On the mound, all 14 pitchers are eligible to return. According to McFarland, right-handers Richard Ivey, a rising senior and the 1985 most valuable pitcher with a 3.30

1985 Baseball Team

ERA; rising sophomores Keith Bridges and Donald Shives; and rising seniors Dan Elliott and Bobby Avery were all effective. Left-handers Doug Hooper and Robbie Sparks both had good years.

Jack Moore, a rising senior who was out most of the season with appendicitis, will also return to the pitching staff next year. Eleven pitchers recorded victories this season.

Victories in 1985 included two game sweeps over district rivals Mars Hill, Lenoir-Rhyne and Guilford. Also, for the second consecutive year, G-W defeated Atlantic Coast Conference member Wake Forest. McFarland felt that one stretch of the season was an example of what is yet to come for the Bulldogs.

"In a seven game winning streak, we scored 89 runs, hit 12 home runs, won four district games, beat powerful Spartanburg Methodist, and defeated Wake Forest 10-7," McFarland said. "This is what we are capable of."

him respect from his peers across America as evidenced by his election to many offices at the national level. I will always be appreciative of the assistance and support he gave me for four years."

Alexander has held several offices in the NAIA-SID association. He began as secretary and he also served in the second and first vice president positions.

He received three national brochure awards in 1984. His football program placed second in the nation among NAIA schools and his press guide finished in the top 10. He has had football programs place in the top five since 1979 when his program was rated best in the nation. His combined men's and women's basketball program was named best in the nation this year.

Alexander, a 1976 G-W graduate, began his work at G-W in August 1976 as an admissions counselor. He holds a bachelor's degree in health and physical education. He was named sports information director and executive director of the Bulldog Club in 1978 and assistant athletic director in 1984.

While a student at G-W, he was a member of the tennis team and residence director of Myers dormitory for men.

A native of Gastonia, he is the son of Ken and Betty Alexander and he is married to the former Melanie Williams of Kernersville.

held by Dean Helton with 63.8 percent from the number five and six positions in 1978-80.

A new record of 57.5 percent (38-28) was also set by Law in career doubles percentage. This record was held by Brimberry with a 55.5 percent mark from 1973-76.

Randy Alexander, Gardner-Webb College sports information director (SID), assistant athletic director and men's tennis coach, resigned his positions May 8.

"We will miss Randy who has been a vital part of the athletic program at Gardner-Webb College," said M. Henry Garrity, G-W athletic director. "Sport commentators and writers have said over and over again that Randy's releases are on time and accurate."

"Randy has been a great help in the running of Spangler stadium and the Paul Porter Arena in which he had full responsibility of intercollegiate events."

Alexander was voted the "National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) District 26 SID of the Year" for the 1984-85 academic year. He was picked by his fellow SIDs in the 20-school district which encompasses Virginia and all of North Carolina.

Alexander's tennis team had its best-ever season as an intercollegiate team with 23 wins and three losses this year. He has been the tennis coach since 1983.

Former athletic director Dan Moore said of Alexander, "Randy's active participation in sports, his knowledge of Gardner-Webb athletics and his willingness to go the extra mile have made him a most effective director of sports information."

Randy's effective leadership has brought tied the record for most doubles victories with 38, a mark established by Mitch Harris from 1981-84. Law's 85 victories in career singles and doubles play bettered the previous mark of 80 set also by Harris.

Law finished his G-W career a close second in singles percentage playing at both the number one and two positions with a 63.5 percent mark. The record is

Best Ever Season

It was a record breaking season for Gardner-Webb's men's tennis in 1985. A new team victory mark of 23 was established along with a host of other records set by the Randy Alexander coached squad.

The season was also highlighted by victories over Clemson, Davidson, Florida A&M, Lenoir Rhyne and Wofford.

New records were established for most singles victories in a season by Rob Land, Stan Law and Shawn Ingram. Land set the record at the number one position with 19 wins. Law set the mark at the number two position also with 19 victories, and Ingram established a new win record at number six with 23 wins.

The record for most doubles team victories was broken by Land and Law, playing at the number one and two positions, with 19. This bettered the previous mark of 17 set by Randy Alexander and Bert Brimberry playing from the number one position in 1976.

The record breaking trio of Ingram, Land and Law also moved into the top three slots in the G-W record book in the category of most combined singles and doubles victories in a season. Ingram became number one in 1985 with 40 wins. Land and Law moved into a tie for number two with 38.

A host of new individual career records were also set by Law.

Law set a new mark for most career singles victories with 47 from 1983-85. He

Those present for the "Roast" enjoyed an evening of good food and entertainment.

Even Dr. Williams' wife Beth and daughter Lee got into the act as they told the audience stories of the president as a family man.

Dr. Williams helped the G-W sign language choir perform "We are the World" and "Let's Hear it for the Boy" at the "Roast".

All Fun and Games at Roast

The college president was teased, mocked, harassed and kidded by his peers and family, but was not left speechless at his "Roast" April 18.

Dr. Craven Williams was "roasted" by his wife Beth Williams, Dr. James Ralph Scales, president emeritus of Wake Forest University, George Shinn, a Charlotte businessman, Eddie Wilkins and Dina Smith, G-W basketball standouts and others. Paul Cameron, WBTV sports commentator, was the master of ceremonies.

Three hundred and ten people attended the "Roast" that raised over $23,000 for the G-W Bulldog Club. The money will be used to expand the Bulldog room in the Lutz-Yelton Convocation Center and to create the Bulldog Hall of Fame in the DeHart concourse.

After the roasters had finished their "roasting", Dr. Williams gave his rebuttal to their remarks. The audience enjoyed his comments, but had the last laugh along with the "roasters" when student body president Carol Whitmire ended the program.

Miss Whitmire brought a cream pie with her to the podium and was strongly urged by all to put it in the president's face. The pie never left her hand, but some of the cream was used to paint a moustache on the president. "I always wondered how you would look with a moustache," Miss Whitmire said. "We really do love you."

Coach Jim Wiles and Coach Woody Fish presented Dr. Williams with a Bulldog hat and windbreaker so that student government president Carol Whitmire could give him a present from the senior class.

Basketball standout Dina Smith offered her sentiments on the way G-W women athletes are treated and gave Dr. Williams presents from past road trips.

Dr. Rance Henderson, G-W trustee from Morganton, joked about the character of the president.
