GOAL Designed to Fit Students' Lifestyles

Thompson

"Gardner-Webb College is offering working adults a chance to go back to school," says Evan

Thompson, dean of special studies at the College.

Through the GOAL (Greater Opportunities for Adult Learners) program, adults who have earned an associate's degree or completed the equivalent (64 semester hours or 96 quarter hours of credit) can work toward a four-year degree without altering their lifestyles.

The GOAL program, now in its 10th year, is designed to serve students who are unable to pursue a day program because of work schedules, family responsibilities or geographic locations.

The program, which began as an off-campus program for students in the Kings Mountain and Lincolnton areas, now has an enrollment of 714 and covers a 16 to 18 county area. Classes are offered in Charlotte, Dallas, Dobson, Morganton, Newton, Rockingham, Statesville, Troy, Wilkesboro and Winston-Salem in addition to the Gardner-Webb campus.

In many of these areas, classes are offered on community college campuses. In others, classes meet at area high schools or other designated locations. Classes are taught by Gardner-Webb professors and adjunct professors.

Currently 11 fields of study are offered through the GOAL program: accounting, business administration, business management, health management, management information systems, early childhood education (K-4), intermediate education (4-6), criminal justice, human services, nursing and religion.

Not all curriculum areas are offered at all sites. "The purpose is to address needs," says Jerome Scott, assistant dean of special studies at Gardner-Webb. Scott explains that student interest governs which areas of study are offered.

Like-wise, the GOAL program is not offered traditionally in areas without requests from prospective students in that area. "We are slow in starting programs," says Scott, "Once we go into an area, we are committed to stay there for at least two years."

"Once we go into an area we are committed to stay there for at least two years."

GOAL classes are offered two nights each week. A student taking four classes can earn 12 hours for the semester. If a student takes a full load each semester, including the summer, he can graduate in two years.

GOAL classes are $99 per semester hour or $1188, plus books, for a 12-hour semester. Financial aid offerings such as grants and loans are the same for GOAL students as for day students.

For information concerning the GOAL program, contact Jerome Scott or Evan Thompson, 434-2361 or toll free 1-800-222-2312.

Orientation Session Brought Staff, Students Together for Day

GOAL (Greater Opportunities for Adult Learners) held an orientation meeting in January for all GOAL students.

Evan Thompson, dean of special studies, and E. Jerome Scott, assistant dean of special studies, conducted the session.

The College's senior staff was on hand for remarks to the students.

During the orientation session, students were given information on the format of GOAL and its purpose. Those participating were given assistance in registration procedures by Kinney Schulte, registrar, and LouAnn Scates, assistant registrar.

Shirley Pyron, student accounts manager, was on hand with information from her office. Marie Martin, financial planning director, discussed financial aid. Students were acquainted with the Campus Shop by Freida Collins, bookstore manager.

The afternoon included an advising session with Dr. Janie Carlton, Dr. John Chesky, Dr. Barry Hambright, Harvey Hamrick and Dr. Robert Lamb.

Coaches Woody Fish and Jim Wiles discussed Gardner-Webb College athletics at the close of the afternoon.

Following the orientation session, the students attended a dinner in the Dover Campus Center Lounge and attended the Gardner-Webb vs. Belmont Abbey basketball game.

GOAL students were on campus for a day-long GOAL orientation recently. The day ended with dinner and a basketball game.

GOAL Played Role in Student's Career Advancement

Barbour

Phyllis Barbour graduated from Gardner-Webb College's GOAL program in December, 1986 with a bachelor's degree in business administration.

Mrs. Barbour was able to complete her education, which had started with an associate's degree in business administration from Gaston College, through the Dallas Center at North Gaston High School.

"I could get my education conveniently, without having to commute," Mrs. Barbour says today, explaining her draw to the GOAL program at Gardner-Webb. However, the reason for Mrs. Barbour's interest in the Gardner-Webb program was more than convenience. "Gardner-Webb was a pioneer in adult learning for working adults, I could get a college degree without trying to do it during the day," she says, "And, Gardner-Webb had a stronger program."

In April, 1980, Mrs. Barbour was employed as an executive secretary with Public Service Company of North Carolina, Inc., a natural gas utility located in Gastonia and serving 2000 natural gas customers in this state.

By May, 1980, she had completed her associate's degree and was promoted to administrative assistant to the president. In the fall of 1983, she entered Gardner-Webb's GOAL program, where she completed her bachelor's degree in three years.

Today, Phyllis Barbour is still with Public Service Company of North Carolina, Inc. She is administrative assistant to the president and holds the position of assistant secretary on the corporation's board of directors, an elected office. "There are only two women of the 16 officers on slate," Mrs. Barbour says.

"GOAL was a very positive experience for me," Mrs. Barbour says, adding that the administrative staff and professors were very supportive and very sensitive to the needs of the working adult student.

"They provide a very quality program," Mrs. Barbour says. She also voices that the liberal arts portion of her education helped her to "understand life," while the business helped her to cope in a corporate environment and to understand the business world.

"They provide a very quality program," Mrs. Barbour says. She also voices that the liberal arts portion of her education helped her to "understand life," while the business helped her to cope in a corporate environment and to understand the business world.

The GOAL program helped prepare Mrs. Barbour for her next educational step. She is now about halfway through the MBA program at Queens College in Charlotte.

Mrs. Barbour is married and she and her husband, Bill, have a son, Scott, who will enter the engineering program at North Carolina State University this fall. "I wanted to set an example for my son," says Mrs. Barbour, who has maintained a 4.0 Grade Point Average throughout her educational processes. "He sees first hand the relationship between academic and professional and personal success," she says.

Faw Passes CPA in First Sitting

James Faw of Wilkesboro, a graduate of Gardner-Webb College's GOAL Program, recently passed the Certified Public Accountant exam in one sitting, scoring the second highest grade in the state.

Faw, 28, graduated with a degree in accounting in December, 1988. He passed the CPA exam in November, 1988.

Only eight percent of those who take the CPA exam pass in the first sitting.

GWC Graduate Program Designed for Working Teachers

The Gardner-Webb College graduate program, launched in 1980 with 60 students, has grown in numbers as well as in areas of study.

Today, the graduate program is 350 students strong. In addition to the on-campus program, it extends to five off-campus centers, located in Gaston, Davidson, Forsythe, Surry and Moore Counties.

The graduate program offerings include master's degrees in early childhood and intermediate education, middle school education, health education, physical education, school administration, counselor education and, in off-campus settings, English education for 6-9 and 9-12. In addition, a social studies program is being developed for Surry County.

Dr. Gilmer Blackburn, associate dean for academic affairs, has administered the program since 1983. "We pride ourselves in two features," Dr. Blackburn says, "We have done more than 25 clusters (10 courses each) and have never terminated a program." He explains that Gardner-Webb is committed to teaching the entire course load. A graduate center will not close down until the students complete the program. "This motivates us to do a first-rate job," he says.

The program is designed for working teachers. Dr. Blackburn points out that teachers can keep their jobs and attend classes, which are offered one night each week through the school year and two nights each week in the summer. A graduate cluster usually takes two school years plus one summer term to complete.

Gardner-Webb is experienced in offering programs in off-campus situations. For the convenience of the student, registration is done on site. Books are delivered to the center and advising is done at the program location. Library privileges at Wake Forest University have been extended to Gardner-Webb graduate students in that area. Other students are within driving distance of the main campus library.

Dr. Blackburn says that the program has had a low attrition rate. "We have an academically rigorous program," he says. While Gardner-Webb's graduate program classes meet 45 contact hours, programs at some other colleges meet as few as 36 contact hours. "We do it because we're interested in quality," he says.

The tuition for the graduate program is approximately $3000 for 10 courses. Depending on their number of years teaching, teachers will recover the investment in about one to two years, according to Dr. Blackburn. "Professionally, teachers can't afford not to work toward an MA," he says, noting that eventually a master's degree will be the norm.

Some areas of the state have a number of graduate programs, offered by various schools. Dr. Blackburn says that Gardner-Webb's selling power is that it offers more in the way of additional services and more personalized attention. "Being a small, private institution, we can be in touch with the needs of the classroom teacher," he says, noting that all the graduate program instructors at Gardner-Webb College have public school system experience.

Instructors go to great lengths to help students stay in the program once they begin, taking into account such things as personal emergencies, working around maternity situations and job transfers.

Dr. Blackburn expresses pride in the general attitude of the people who teach in Gardner-Webb's graduate program. And, while many of Gardner-Webb's graduate students are not on campus until graduation, Dr. Blackburn has found that these same students take pride in being a part of Gardner-Webb. "We try to provide something of the Gardner-Webb spirit when we take programs off campus," he says.

Dr. Blackburn works with Stephen Sain, assistant to the associate dean for academic affairs; graduate assistant Roy Kirby; graduate office secretary Libby Glenn; and student secretary Trent Jessup. The graduate staff talks with school personnel and superintendents, recruits, establishes centers and oversees registration. "It is the most rewarding experience I've had at Gardner-Webb, Dr. Blackburn says, "It offers me the opportunity to actually create something.

"There are hundreds of teachers who are better teachers because of something we've done," he adds.

Kirby Named First Spangler Graduate Assistant

Roy A. Kirby of Boiling Springs has been named the first recipient of the Spangler Graduate Assistantship at Gardner-Webb College.

The assistantship is given in honor of Eloise Spangler and the late Pat Spangler. It is in the amount of $10,000 plus tuition for a program of study covering two calendar years.

Kirby is a 1975 graduate of Crest High School and a 1979 graduate of Gardner-Webb College with a degree in business administration. He will work as a graduate assistant in the Office of Graduate Studies while pursuing a master of arts degree in physical education at Gardner-Webb.

A member of the North Carolina High School Coaches Association and the National Strength and Conditioning Association, Kirby has been an assistant football coach at Crest High School since August, 1988.

The son of the Rev. and Mrs. C.A. Kirby Jr. of Boiling Springs, the recipient was a football standout at both Crest High School and Gardner-Webb. Following his graduation from Gardner-Webb, he worked as territorial sales manager for both Porter Brothers and Virginia Outdoor Equipment Company.

Recycling is the word about campus these days. The college administrative staff and faculty have recently launched a recycling effort at Gardner-Webb.

Dr. Les Brown, professor of biology, introduced the idea to the college and is now serving as project coordinator.

The recycling effort on campus is part of Cleveland County's conservation plan. On Feb. 1, Denese Stallings, health director of the Cleveland County Health Department and Chuck Richberg of Paperstock Company in Gastonia (a recycling firm) spoke to interested faculty and staff concerning the advantages of recycling. Russ Croft, director of the Gardner-Webb Physical Plant, was on hand to assist with the mechanics of collecting the recyclable materials.

The objectives of the project include the promotion of a successful, ongoing recycling program for the college; the education of both students and employees about the need to recycle; and assistance in resource recovery.

According to G. Tyler Miller's "Living in the Environment," the average American directly or indirectly uses approximately 600 pounds of paper each year.

Although the campaign was officially launched in March, employees at the college have been collecting recyclable materials such as ledger paper, computer paper, aluminum cans and newspaper for several weeks.

Rogers Family Keeps GWC on the Road

By Jack Folk

The Rogers Automotive Network, with its home base in Shelby, has established a time-honored tradition in excellence in automobile sales and service to Cleveland County.

Gardner-Webb College has established its own time-honored tradition as a Baptist affiliated institution with a commitment to quality Christian higher education.

Quality education is something in which Ernest Rogers believes and Gardner-Webb has benefitted from his commitment to education.

Since Rogers joined with Jimmy Blanton to form a Pontiac-Cadillac dealership in 1961, he has carried out what has become a 28-year practice of having the company donate a new car to the College for the president's use.

In 1966, Ernest Rogers became sole owner of the company, Rogers Pontiac-Cadillac, Inc. In 1982, Buick became a part of the Rogers team and in 1985 GMC truck joined to create Rogers Pontiac-Cadillac-Buick-GMC Truck, Inc.

Rogers began an early retirement in 1986 when his sons, Pat and Charles, took over the Rogers Automotive Network. He felt confident that he had, "two sons very capable of running the business." Pat is president and chief executive officer and Charles is vice president.

Pat and Charles have upheld the tradition of support to Gardner-Webb College. This year, they presented Dr. Chris White a 1989 Buick LeSabre to use for the year. The Rogers brothers are as committed to providing this service to Gardner-Webb as their father was.

The admissions office at Gardner-Webb has also benefitted over the years from the generosity of the Rogers family. To carry out student recruiting trips, it is vital that the admissions team have a fleet of quality, well-serviced vehicles. The Rogers Network has supplied cars to the College as well as the maintenance service they require.

"The involvement of the Rogers family and business in the life of Gardner-Webb has made a significant impact on the College," says Dr. White, "Their help in supplying and keeping the admissions fleet and the president's car on the road has been very critical."

Pat and Charles are involved in a number of ways with Gardner-Webb. Pat serves as the official transportation consultant. He is also a past member of the Board of Advisors. Charles, who is a current member of the Board of Advisors, serves as chairman of that board's finance committee.

As the College continues its effort to provide high standards in all areas of involvement with students and the community, the Rogers family pledge of quality and service will remain an integral part of keeping those standards high.

Pat Rogers hands over a set of car keys to Dr. Chris White while Charles Rogers looks on.

Campus Enjoyed Winter of Cultural Offerings

This year's winter arts began in January with a concert by American pianist Eric Larsen.

Larsen, one of the most versatile artists of his generation, awed his audience with such selections as George Crumb's arrangement of "A Little Suite for Christmas AD 1979," and pieces by a number of composers, including Bach and Busoni, Chopin, Mozart and Rachmaninoff.

Gospel Song Fest

February's events were launched with the Fourth Annual Gospel Song Fest, sponsored by the College and the Student Center Board.

The Song Fest, which included "Rising Stars," Cleveland Community College Visiting Artist Paula Larke, the Anderson Junior College Choir and soloist Georgia B. Guest, was highlighted by a performance of The City of Asheville Mass Choir.

'A Night of One Acts'

The Gardner-Webb Drama Department presented "A Night of One Acts," in February.

The three one-act plays included "Goodbye to the Clown," directed by Missy Whitlow; "The Song of Louise in the Morning," directed by Henry Styron; and "The Indian Wants the Bronx," directed by Dr. Rudee Boan.

Cast members for "Goodbye to the Clown," were Jon McNeil, Cynthia Newman, Karen Martin, David Workman, Katy Winkler and Steve Hamrick. The cast of "The Song of Louise....," included Lisa Sabbarth, Geoff Lloyd and Nina Schnipper; and "The Indian Wants the Bronx," featured Shawn Lewis, Jimmy Ireton and Barry Martin.

'Flower and Hawk'

The Artist Series of Gardner-Webb presented the Piedmont Opera Theatre in the monodrama for soprano, "Flower and Hawk," this season.

The opera, written by South Carolina native Carlisle Floyd, featured Matilda Nickel, soprano. The work is based on the events in the life of Eleanor of Aquitaine, often regarded as the greatest woman of the Middle Ages.

The Piedmont Opera Theatre is a professional opera company based in Winston-Salem. It is under the direction of Norman Johnson, director of opera at the North Carolina School of the Arts.

Faculty/Guest Recital

Carolyn Billings and Patti Peterson were featured during March at a Faculty/Guest Recital.

Dr. Billings is an associate professor at Gardner-Webb, where she teaches piano, music theory, piano pedagogy and accompanying. She has taught at Gardner-Webb since 1979.

She holds a bachelor of music degree from Salem College in Winston-Salem, a master of music degree from the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana and a doctor of music arts in piano performance from the University of Missouri in Kansas City.

Patti Peterson earned a bachelor of music degree in piano from Salem College. She entered the University of Colorado in Boulder to pursue a graduate degree in piano. While there, she developed an interest in singing. Studying with Barbara Doscher, she earned a master's of music and doctorate of music in voice.

Dr. Peterson has coached and studied with such notables as Martin Katz, Renato Cappecchi, Martin Isepp, Gerard Souzay and Gerhardt Husch.

A member of the department of performing arts at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, she frequently performs the music of North Carolina composers as well as the more traditional art song recitals, opera and oratorio.

Asheville Symphony and Choral Union

The Asheville Symphony and Choral Union performed John Rutter's "Requiem" on campus in March.

Rutter is the most popular new composer of the 20th Century, noted for his "For the Beauty of the Earth." "Requiem" included a presentation of his arrangement, "The Lord is My Shepherd."

Among the pieces presented were Beethoven's "Hallelujah," Handel's "Sing Unto God," and Kopylow's "Heavenly Light."

Other highlights for the Concert Choir were an appearance in the opening session of the 1989 National Baptist Doctrine Conference at Charlotte's First Baptist Church and a spring tour during March to the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia.

Rutherford County Capital Campaign Tops $425,000

The Rutherford County portion of Gardner-Webb College's $5.9 million capital campaign closed Feb. 21 with a luncheon in Forest City.

Due to the efforts of a number of Rutherford County residents, the campaign neared its goal of $500,000. Contributions at the close of the campaign topped $425,000, with several campaign pledges still outstanding.

The purpose of the four month campaign, entitled, "The Future: Building on a Solid Foundation," was to secure funds for campus improvements and academic enrichments and endowments.

In addition, the campaign was an effort to reaffirm that Gardner-Webb College is Rutherford County's senior college, with Rutherford County as the College's second largest supplier of students.

Also, the campaign served to strengthen the local support of the College through a network of individuals, businesses and industry.

Individuals who assisted as area chairpersons for the campaign were Johnny McDonald of Cone Mills and Dr. Betty Solomon, Ellenboro and Cliffside; Doug Huntley of Community Bank and Trust, Forest City; James Cowan of Stonecutter Mills, Spindale; Barbara Hodge of the Rutherford Spindale Chamber of Commerce and Jim Ruppe of Bolick, Ruppe and Associates, Rutherfordton.

Broyhill Academy Sponsors "One Minute Manager"

Dr. Patricia Zigarmi, sponsored by the Broyhill Academy of Gardner-Webb College, presented a one-day seminar, The One-Minute Manager, on campus in January.

Dr. Zigarmi, an outstanding consultant, author, trainer and speaker, is vice president of sales for Blanchard Training and Development, Inc. She is co-author of "Leadership and the One-Minute Manager," the third book in Dr. Ken Blanchard's best-selling One-Minute Manager Library.

Her seminars on leadership, communication, productivity improvement and team building continue to be in demand by corporations and community and professional organizations.

A founding associate of Blanchard Training and Development, Dr. Zigarmi has served as a staff member on Capitol Hill, as research associate at the University of Texas and as vice president of her own management consulting and training company.

A graduate of Northwestern University, she earned a doctorate in leadership and organizational development from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

The seminar provided insights for those who manage people, from supervisors to top-ranking officers. Dr. Zigarmi shared the three skills of a situational leader -- flexibility, diagnosis and contracting for leadership style -- and how to use them effectively.

Blind Students Get the Feeling of Biltmore House

By Melissa Henslee
Senior, 1989

I sighed heavily in anticipation of the boredom that usually comes with any trip that involves visiting museums and old houses.

Usually, one is not allowed to touch anything. Though the blind students had been assured this trip would be different, I was dubious about the whole affair.

Thus, it was with a great deal of reluctance that I consented to go to the Biltmore House.

Sharon Jennings and Janice Gibson, who work with the visually impaired students at Gardner-Webb, had arranged a special tour with the Biltmore House staff. The tour was for blind students who receive support services from the College.

The day finally arrived and, in spite of my skepticism, the excitement of the other students and the staff finally kindled the flame of curiosity in me.

As Janice drove up the driveway, she told us of the streams that ran along the way. The driveway seemed to go on forever, but after about 20 minutes, we reached the house. We were greeted by four young ladies from the Biltmore staff. Each of them had a specific portion of the house to guide us through.

So that we might get a feeling for the vastness of the Biltmore House, we first walked along the outside of the building. As we walked, a brief history of the Biltmore Estate was given. On this portion of the tour, the major motifs of the Biltmore House were emphasized. Monsters and acorns were two of the dominant themes.

Another important aspect of this part of the tour was the elaborate ornamentation that appeared everywhere. Even the columns that supported the house consisted of many intricate designs.

Next, we toured the main floor which had several highlights. First, the banquet hall with its height of 70 feet proved just how vast this home was. The banquet hall was originally designed for the display of tapestries. There were five tapestries that dealt with the love triangle of Venus, Mars and Vulcan.

Unfortunately, we could not touch the tapestries, but the tour guides provided us with a bit of tapestry on a frame so that we could get an idea of how detailed and intricate the work was.

The library proved to be impressive. Two spiral staircases led to the topmost shelves. The furniture was tall, stately and grand. And, as in the banquet hall, the fireplace was particularly elaborate.

The tapestries that hung in this room also held particular interest for me. Three tapestries depicted the theme of good triumphing over evil. The three virtues represented were faith, prudence and charity.

Then, we climbed a massive staircase that had been designed to allow plenty of space for the wide skirts worn in those days. We viewed several of the bedrooms, including those of George Vanderbilt and his wife. Once again, the rooms were elaborately designed and furnished with art works of all types.

We visited the basement, where the recreation facilities and kitchens were located. In this area of the house, the most interesting room was the Halloween room. In 1926 each guest was given a portion of the wall in this room to paint. I found its emphasis on individual creativity appealing, even though the paintings did not make much sense if one could not see them.

The staff of the Biltmore House proved to be extremely competent and helpful. In one instance, when we could not actually touch the furniture, a sample of fabric was provided. This allowed us to use our imaginations to view the genuine article. The verbal commentary was so helpful that other tourists lingered now and then to listen to their descriptions to our questions.

Overall, the visually impaired students responded positively to the tour. In fact, it appears that we were all awed at being able to view a lifestyle to which we are unaccustomed. Before we knew it, three hours in which we had surrounded ourselves with the past, had passed.

As a person, Vanderbilt appealed to me in several ways. He was a scholar and he spoke eight different languages. He collected art that he liked even though it might not be popular. And, he had money. From what I could gather from examining a bust of his head and from exclamations by the sighted people who were with us, Vanderbilt was not a bad looking man. In fact, it would be nice to marry someone like that and inherit all of his art, books and wealth.

Note: This tour was an experiment conducted by the Biltmore House. The facility is not yet providing guided tours for the blind. The tour was specially arranged between the Biltmore House and the Gardner-Webb Program for the Blind.

International Flair

GWC is Home Away From Home

Twenty-three students from 19 countries were honored Tuesday, Jan. 31 with a reception at the home of Gardner-Webb College President and Mrs. M. Christopher White.

The students, all members of the student body at Gardner-Webb College, represent a cross-section of cultures, backgrounds, religions and traditions.

Dr. Richard H. Franklin, vice president and dean for student development at Gardner-Webb, says the purpose of the reception was to let the international students know how much they add to campus. "We appreciate who you are and what you represent and what you can do for us as an institution," is Dr. Franklin's message to the students.

An International Student Club is being formed for the students. Dr. Rudee Boan, assistant professor of sociology at the College, will advise the club. The club, according to Dr. Franklin, will help create a support group in which the international students can get to know one another. The upperclassmen can advise entering students on ways to adjust, on tips for survival in new surroundings.

Dr. Franklin points out that often the international students may feel isolated. Efforts are often geared toward the traditional age American student, leaving the international students to feel isolated.

Gardner-Webb's international students and their countries include: Roney Abraham, Saudia, Arabia; Per Lennart Albertsson, Stockholm, Sweden; Oscar Edwards Blacutt, Lapaz, Bolivia; Ngha Alfred Clovis, Cameroon, Africa; Jimmy Douangdara, Laos; Bernard Gay, Bahamas; Maria Auroa P. Chairperson for the event was Sandy Lanham.

Alcoholic Support Group Launched on Campus

An Adult Children of Alcoholics (ACOA) support group has been launched at Gardner-Webb.

The support group, open to faculty, staff and students, meets in the Charles I. Dover Campus Center.

ACOA therapy and counseling groups have been rapidly increasing in number since the early 1980s. These support groups allow adult children of alcoholics an opportunity to question, explore and confirm their needs. This can be done in the context and safety of a group of people who can relate to their experiences.

The work of the group includes recognition of past and present pain, grieving of pain and losses, claiming personal ownership of strengths and recognition of options in daily living.

Anyone interested in the support group should contact Ben Davis or Charlotte Slice at 434-2361.

Hambright 'Arrested' and 'Tried' by his peers

What noted professor of political science and history at Gardner-Webb College was recently handed a warrant of arrest by his colleagues for the crime of Peer Harassment? Dr. Barry Hambright seems to be the answer.

The charges handed down during the arrest and trial, all held in the Faculty Dining Room of the Dover Campus Center, were billed as "a multitude of high crimes and misdemeanors ... caused untold distress, anguish and embarrassment to his peers."

Charges included Sarcasm (ridicule of motherhood and the familial responsibilities of female colleagues; ridicule and disrespect of colleagues who have acquired administrative titles; and ridicule of colleagues who combine the dual responsibilities of coaching and teaching); Narrative Technique of Distortion (habitually colors accounts of events, particularly those occurring on trips with colleagues); Stance of Superiority (gloats in the superiority of the Republican party); and Insensitivity (constantly seeks areas of vulnerability within his colleagues by perusing their written and spoken words for possible areas of attack, not only within the immediate time frame but for use in future days, weeks, months, years and possibly in the afterlife...)

Hambright stands accused of abusing his peers, with Dr. Blackburn reading the charges and Judge James Taylor presiding.

1988-89 GARDNER-WEBB BASKETBALL

The Gardner-Webb men had an up and down season this year starting strong, with eight consecutive victories and being ranked as high as 12th in the NAIA national poll.

However, the seemingly invincible Bulldogs of the pre-Christmas era fell on hard times after Christmas. Teams exploited Gardner-Webb's weakness, a lack of consistent outside shooters with a variety of sagging zone, man-to-man, and combination defenses.

The Bulldogs, who were 8-1 before the break, tumbled to 8-9 after Christmas to finish the season at 16-10. Even the problems in the second half of the season could not keep the Bulldogs from the playoffs.

Gardner-Webb made the playoffs for the second consecutive season but again drew the formidable task of playing Belmont Abbey in the first round. Belmont Abbey, the District 26 regular season champion, had defeated Gardner-Webb handily on two earlier occasions, but were in a battle this time from the start. When the game was over, however, Belmont Abbey came away with a hard fought 90-85 victory, and Gardner-Webb's season came to an end.

Seniors Donald Simmons and Stan Easterling had outstanding senior campaigns to wrap up their careers. Simmons led the team in scoring with 20.6 points per game average while Easterling was next with a 19.0 average. Easterling led the team in rebounding with 8.7 per game while Simmons was third at 5.4 per game. Simmons also contributed 3.2 assists and 1.7 steals while making good on 56 of 126 three point field goals for 44.4 percent. Easterling shot a team leading 59.1 percent from the floor and contributed 2.2 assists per game and blocked 32 shots. He finishes his career as the number three scorer and rebounder in Gardner-Webb history (2,134; 1,062).

Simmons finishes his two year career (he transferred from Columbia Junior College) as the 11th leading scorer in Gardner-Webb history with 1,129 points.

In mentioning other bright spots for Gardner-Webb this season, one has to mention 6-8 freshman Patrick Colson. Colson averaged 10.9 points, 6.1 rebounds and 1.4 blocked shots per game while shooting 55.9 percent from the floor. He has tremendous promise and could very well be Gardner-Webb's next All-American. The play of junior point guard Darren Sanders late in the season was another positive sign for the Runnin' Bulldogs. Sanders finished the season with a 5.4 points per game average and a team leading 4.2 assists per game average. He also contributed some needed outside shooting late in the season.

Other players who helped the Bulldogs this season and who will be counted on next season include: Blease Young (6.4 points, 4.1 rebounds, 2.4 assists), Thomas Plaster (5.3 points, 2.5 rebounds, 52.6 percent from the floor, 80.7 percent from the foul line), and Reggie Ampley (3.3 points, 3.1 rebounds, 3.1 assists, 1.5 steals). Junior Kevin Miller and sophomore Thomas Turner transferred to Gardner-Webb and were ineligible the first semester and never really fit into the flow of things. However, both have outstanding talent and could be stars next year.

ALL DISTRICT SELECTIONS

Seniors Stan Easterling, from McColl, S.C. and Donald Simmons, from Charlotte, were named to the All-District 26 squad. It was the third year in a row for Easterling and the second year in a row for Simmons. Easterling averaged 19.0 points and 8.7 rebounds this season while Simmons averaged 20.6 points, 5.4 rebounds and 3.2 assists.

GARDNER-WEBB COLLEGE 2ND TEAM ALL-AMERICAN STAN EASTERLING

McColl, S.C.

Gardner-Webb basketball player Stan Easterling has been named second team NAIA All-American.

The 6'8" senior from McColl, S.C. led the Bulldogs to a 16-10 record and a District 26 playoff berth this past season. He averaged 19.0 points and 8.7 rebounds this season while shooting 59.1 percent from the floor. He also averaged 2.2 assists and blocked 32 shots.

During his career at Gardner-Webb he scored 2,134 points and pulled down 1,062 rebounds to rank third on both all-time Gardner-Webb lists. Three times during his career he was named All-District 26 and twice he was named District 26 Player of the Year. He has made All-Tournament teams on 10 different occasions and was named Most Valuable Player in the Birmingham Southern Coca-Cola Tournament in 1987 and in the Boiling Springs Rotary Dixie Classic in 1988. In addition he has been named District 26 Player of the Week five times during his career.

1988-89 GARDNER-WEBB WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

The Gardner-Webb Women Runnin' Bulldogs, under the tutelage of first year coach Bud Black, have just completed one of the most successful seasons in school history. The Ladies won a school record 19 games while losing only nine. In the process, a number of team and individual milestones were recorded.

Initially, as mentioned before, the 19 victories were a school record, breaking the record of 17 set in the 1978-79 season. In fact, the 19 wins were over twice as many as Gardner-Webb had won in the last three years combined (3-19, 0-25, 5-19) and only two short of being as many as Gardner-Webb had won in the last four years combined (13-12, 3-19, 0-25, 5-19). The Women Runnin' Bulldogs were denied opportunities to win two scheduled contests when Catawba and Barber-Scotia were forced to cancel their seasons due to a measles epidemic. If those games were counted as forfeit wins (the games counted as forfeit wins in the district but not in the overall race) the Ladies would have accumulated 21 victories this season.

Other team records broken this year include: Most Rebounds in a Game, 69, versus Pfeiffer (11-22-88); Most Free Throws Made, 31, versus Pfeiffer (11-22-88); Most Points in First Half, 55, versus Meredith (2-9-89); Best Field Goal Percentage in a Season, 43.9 percent; Most Rebounds in a Season, 1451; Best Rebounding Average, 51.8; Most Field Goals Made, 965; Most Field Goals Attempted, 2197; Most Points Scored in a Season, 2353; and Most Times Scoring over 90 points, 9. Individual records set include: Most Free Throws in a Game, 16, Fredia Lawrence versus Lenoir-Rhyne (12-9-88); Most Free Throws Attempted, 19, Fredia Lawrence versus Lenoir-Rhyne (12-9-88); Best Field Goal Percentage (minimum 10 attempts), 9-10 (90.0%), Fredia Lawrence versus Meredith (12-3-88); Most Points Scored in One Season, 612, Fredia Lawrence; Three Point Field Goals Made, 60, Benita Tilley; Three Point Percentage (minimum of 50 attempts), 39.2 percent, Benita Tilley.

Freshman guard Fredia Lawrence was the key to Gardner-Webb's resurgence this season averaging 21.9 points, 7.5 rebounds, 3.6 assists and 2.4 steals per game. Her 612 points this season were a record for the Lady Bulldogs and she was named All-District 26 for her efforts. Junior guard Benita Tilley played very well this season averaging 12.8 points, and 5.1 assists per contest. She also hit 60 three-pointers on the year. Freshman forward Valerie Crowell averaged 11.9 points and 7.1 rebounds per game. Freshman Terra Miller contributed 8.9 points and 6.5 rebounds per game, while freshman Hattie Young averaged 6.2 points, 7.7 rebounds and 2.2 blocked shots. Guards junior Roxanne Ferguson (6.2 points, 2.6 assists) and freshman Lisa Campbell (6.0 points, 2.4 assists) also played very well.

This year's team recorded some other significant firsts as well. They scored their first ever win over Central Wesleyan and followed that up with two more victories over the Lady Warriors to run the series record to 3-4. Gardner-Webb also recorded its first win ever over High Point and now trails the Lady Panthers 1-3. But the most significant wins came over the Lenoir-Rhyne Lady Bears, the first two wins in 24 tries in the series that spans Gardner-Webb's existence as a four-year college. The Women also played three first time opponents this season in Columbia, Bluefield, and Montreat-Anderson (twice) and won all four games. Prior to this season, Gardner-Webb had a combined record of 33-97 (.340 winning percentage) against this year's opponents as compared to this year's 19-9 record (.679 winning percentage).

With 11 freshmen on this year's squad and only one senior (reserve Kim Haywood), the future looks very bright. If a few key recruits pan out, next year could definitely find the Women Runnin' Bulldogs of Gardner-Webb among the elite of the SAC-8 and District 26, and maybe even of the entire nation.

Gardner-Webb outscored opponents by an average of 12.2 points per game, 84.0 to 71.8. The Women Runnin' Bulldogs finished the season as the 11th highest scoring team in the nation.

Fredia Lawrence, a freshman from Lawndale, was named to the All-District 26 team. She average 21.9 points, 7.5 rebounds, 3.6 assists and 2.4 steals per game.

Wilkins Thankful He's Back in NBA

CHARLOTTE - New York sportscaster Marv Albert can call him Eddie Lee Wilkins.

In Boiling Springs, his friends still refer to him simply as Eddie. Whatever the distinction, it's done with respect. He earned it the hard way.

The 6-foot-10 1/2-inch former NAIA All-American from Gardner-Webb College has carved out a niche on the Knick's NBA roster. Though his playing time in recent weeks as starting center Patrick Ewing's backup has dipped somewhat, the mere fact Wilkins is getting paid to play a game he loves reads like a Disney happy ending.

Wilkins, who has seen action in 62 of the 68 New York games this year, made the roster after an impressive off-season in summer camps after playing in the Continental Basketball League last season.

It was quite a comeback year for an athlete whose career seemed over following a serious knee injury in 1985 - similar in nature to the one that befell Bernard King, the former Knicks star now with the Washington Bullets.

"I'm just glad to be back in the League," Wilkins said on a stop through the new Charlotte Coliseum Monday night, where the Knicks widened their Eastern Divisions lead with a win over the Hornets.

"I'm not playing as much since we got (Kiki) Vandeweghe, but he's a great player and the team's still winning," Wilkins said.

Wilkins first made the club as a rookie in 1984 in the vacuum created by several injuries to center prospects for the Knicks. He made a smashing debut, a 24-point performance in an opening win over Detroit and his opponent, Bill Laimbeer. "It was a night that dreams are made of," he said, but the rest of the season saw his playing time decrease.

"When I was injured, I had to adjust my game," said Wilkins, a finesse player in college, who now has bulked up to 225 pounds to take the bumps and bruises of the physical pro game.

"I had to adjust to it mentally as well as physically. It took a lot of work to make it back and I just thank God I got the chance. I had to concentrate on what I do best and keep a positive attitude," he said.

Last fall, Wilkins knew what it would take to succeed.

"I'm 26, so I knew this had to be my year," he said. "When I came into camp I knew I had to put it on the line."

His recovery has astounded many. Despite a long scar, Wilkins said the knee "doesn't give me any pain and I've never had to ice it. I still lift weights (during the season) to keep it strong."

Playing everyday in practice against Ewing, along with working under the watchful eye of head coach Rick Pitino, helped Wilkins adapt to becoming a more physical presence underneath.

"You feel like, if you can score on Patrick, you can play against anybody," Wilkins said. "I take it as a challenge."

The NBA has its share of unique obstacles for a center. Sacramento's Manute Bol, at 7-6, and Utah's Mark Eaton, at 7-4 and 290 pounds, are two of the most incredible.

"I feel like I can score against the average seven-footer," said Wilkins, who averages 4.2 points, "but those two are so tall you have to adjust your game a lot, and I have trouble with that."

Chasing Bol, who has become a league cult favorite for his three-point shooting, is another headache.

"He's so awkward, you don't think he'll hit it," Wilkins said, "but I have to try to get him. If he hits one, my guys (teammates) will let me have it."

The road life with the NBA is another item to deal with.

"The games are the easy part," the Cartersville, GA., native said. "It's hard to travel from city-to-city. It takes its toll on you after a while...you're drained mentally."

"I hang out a little with some of the guys, but I'm a pretty private person," he said, "and I try to get some rest when we're on the road. It's real easy to get burned-out. I'll stay in and watch a movie or something."

Working in New York City has been quite a revelation for Wilkins. "It's nothing like Georgia or North Carolina," he said. "The total hustle and bustle of it is something. I live out in Connecticut, and it's not that bad, I get away from it."

As the stretch-run approaches, Wilkins sees the Knicks - who recently had a three-game tailspin while point guard Mark Jackson recovered from an injury - picking up momentum for the playoffs ahead.

"We've done well against the good teams," he said. "We match up well with them. We've beaten Detroit two out of three times and we've beaten Cleveland."

HOLLOWAY INKS PACT WITH BULLDOGS

Robby Holloway, the 1988 Associated Press 2A football Player of the Year, has signed an athletic scholarship with Gardner-Webb. Holloway, from Maiden High School in North Carolina, had been one of the most sought out recruits in the state. He had been actively recruited by Clemson, North Carolina, Wake Forest, North Carolina A&T, Carson-Newman, and Central State of Ohio.

Holloway gained 4,797 yards during his three years of high school ball and scored 59 touchdowns. During his junior and senior years alone he gained 3,971 yards and scored 50 touchdowns. (2034 yards and 25 touchdowns his junior year and 1,937 yards and 25 touchdowns his senior year) His honors include: All-Conference three years, All-State two years, Piedmont Player of the Year in his Junior and Senior years, Charlotte Observer-WBTV Player of the Year in his Junior and Senior years, Unnifour Player of the Year his senior year, as well as the Associated Press Player of the Year Award.

Nation's Leading Junior College Scorer in Women's Basketball Signs with G-W

Roslyn Edwards, the National Junior College Athletic Association's leading scorer last season, has signed an athletic scholarship to attend Gardner-Webb College.

Edwards, who played for Kennedy-King College in Chicago, Ill., averaged 33.9 points per game last season, outdistancing her nearest competition by 5.8 points per game.

Over the last two years the 5-foot-6-inch guard has averaged 33.1 points while making 48.5 percent of her shots from the floor. During that same period she has made an astounding 50.2 percent of her three-point attempts. Her three point accuracy is even more amazing when considering that this past season she connected on 145 three-point shots and only 113 two-point attempts.

During her two years of junior college ball, Miss Edwards also connected on 71 percent of her free throws. Other highlights of her career thus far include 52 points in a single game, 12 three-pointers in a single game, 746 points in a single season, and 1,324 points in two years.

Edwards joins a Gardner-Webb squad that finished, under first-year coach Bud Black, with a school record 19-9 record last season, despite playing with 13 freshmen and only one senior on the roster.

A new weight room has been added in the Bost Gym. It is fully equipped with a 12-station universal machine and two exercise bikes. The weight room, which was added to service Gardner-Webb students, faculty and staff, was instrumented by Dr. White and Dean Dick Franklin, vice president for student development. According to Dr. Dee Hunt, chair of the health education and physical education department, this new weight room will add more autonomy and flexibility for scheduling classes. Admissions Applications are on the Rise

By Ray Hardee

It doesn't get any better than this!

How are we going to top it? Well, we've done it. We are continuing to do better with your help.

Applications for admission to Gardner-Webb rose 30 percent from 1987 to a record number in 1988. The plateau phenomenon did not hold true this year, despite predictions that admissions applications could not continue to rise. As of March 1, 1989, applications for admissions increased an additional 15 percent over March 1, 1988 figures.

We want to thank you for your recommendations and cooperation. The alumni network of Gardner-Webb College is a vital key to the continuing development of the GWC admission program.

As you work and serve in your community, people see you as examples to follow. You serve as role models for today's potential college student. Your referral of students formally and informally aids us in finding the Gardner-Webb students of tomorrow.

The Alumni Admissions Network is growing. We are striving to keep you informed. We have sent out information packets this year to all alumni on our mailing list. Enclosed in these packets are informational brochures, student referral sheets and an application for you to pass onto students who may be considering application for admission.

If you have received yours, please invest 10 minutes of your time to let us know of potential students in your area. If you have not received a packet, call me at 1-800-222-2311 (in North Carolina) or collect at (704) 434-2214.

One way for us to keep in contact is through this column. We would welcome any comments or suggestions from you. Perhaps you have some suggestions for us as to how we can improve our recruitment programs. Maybe you can recommend an area for us to recruit that is not being explored at this time. Let us know.

Please address your correspondence to Ray M. Hardee, Gardner-Webb College Admissions, Boiling Springs, N.C. 28017.
