Kiah Ann Bellows ('12) to Display Pieces on Campus in February and March

BOILING SPRINGS, N.C.—The works of artist and Gardner-Webb alumna Kiah Ann Bellows will be featured in an exhibit on the University's campus beginning Feb. 15.

The collection of abstract and landscape pieces will showcase color and composition in the display through March 21 in GWU's Tucker Student Center gallery. On Feb. 18, the University's art department will host an opening reception from 4-5 p.m. and a lecture featuring Bellows from 5-6 p.m. in Faith Hall of the student center.

Bellows completed a bachelor's degree in art at GWU in 2012, with concentrations in painting and printmaking.

"The art department at Gardner-Webb developed my skills, helped me share my name and my work in the professional art world, and prepared me for a career in art," she shared.

"The faculty at Gardner-Webb offers one-on-one time and looks at each student as a unique shape and size, allowing students to approach art in a way that works for them."

Bellows currently works as a full-time artist and gallery assistant at Art & Light Gallery and Studios in Greenville, S.C. Her work has been featured in numerous exhibits in the Greenville area.

For more information about the exhibit at Gardner-Webb, contact the GWU Art Department at 704-406-4656.

Auxiliary aids will be made available to persons with disabilities upon request 48 hours prior to the event. Please call 704-406-4253 or email servicerequests@gardner-webb.edu with your request.
