This summer, nearly 3,600 students flocked to the campus of Gardner-Webb University for Crossroads Worldwide Ministries' 2011 Summer Camp. Founded in 1995 by Gardner-Webb alum and accomplished author and evangelist Clayton King, Crossroads Worldwide is a non-profit organization based out of Boiling Springs that promotes evangelism and discipleship around the globe through a variety of ministries, mission trips, and mentoring networks. But its primary ministry is its summer camps, which more than 40,000 students have attended over the past 16 summers. For more information about Crossroads, visit www.crossroadsworldwide.com.

As Crossroads enters the summer's last week of camp, here is a glimpse of the sights and sounds of Crossroads Summer Camp 2011.
